

NIXON BUDGET $246.3 BILLION

... Spending Lid Sought; Deficits Exceed $64 Billion

Washington (AP) — President Nixon rolled out a $246.3-billion fiscal 1973 budget Monday, unveiling two massive deficits totaling $64.3 billion, no new tax proposals, and a request that Congress limit spending to "stop raids on the Treasury."

The President urged Congress to boost the level of defense spending and to vote more money for research and development in both military and civilian programs.

As the big document reached Capitol Hill, Nixon issued a statement asking Congress to impose a rigid ceiling on the $246.3-billion amount that does not "provide any escape hatches whatever."

Big Dose

The big dose of deficits in fiscal 1972 and 1973 are designed to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment. Nevertheless, top officials said, the jobless rate is expected to decline to only about 5% at the end of 1972. It is now 6%.

Spending beyond the limit not only would trigger inflation, Nixon said, but would amount to raids on the Treasury.

Nixon concentrated on existing programs in the huge document, urged Congress to refrain from voting any additional money and defend his own deficit spending as good medicine for the economy.

For the fiscal 1972 year that ends June 30, the budget disclosed, the deficit will be $38.8 billion, the highest in 27 years. Fiscal 1973 will end $25.5 billion in the red.

Nixon said the fiscal 1973 deficit is responsible because it follows the "full-employment budget" concept. Spending, he said, is thus held to the amount of money that would be collected by the government if the economy were operating at maximum efficiency.

"Deficit spending at this time, like temporary wage and price controls, is strong but necessary medicine," he said.

The size of the deficit for the current fiscal year came as no surprise; some officials had predicted it to be as high as $40 billion. Not since the war year of 1945 has the nation seen such a large deficit.

Full-Employment Breached

As a result, Nixon's own "full-employment budget" concept was breached. There was a full-employment deficit of $8.1 billion, due partly to increased spending programs voted by Congress and partly to the administration's own action.

Nixon officially adopted the concept a year ago. It calls for pegging the level of federal spending at the amount of money the tax system would bring in if there was 4% unemployment, the official definition of full employment. The jobless rate is now 6.1%.

Nixon said his program is just right, spending neither too much and kicking off inflation nor too little, which would hold back the rate of economic growth.

While the budget focused on existing programs, Nixon made a pitch for approval of his revenue-sharing, welfare reform and government reorganization programs.

He put $5 billion in the fiscal 1973 budget for his plan to share revenue with the states, even though Congress hasn't passed it.

In addition, Nixon proposed making revenue-sharing retroactive to Jan. 1, putting $2.25 billion in the budget for the current fiscal year to pay for six months of such a program.

For welfare reform, however, there was only $350 million, enough just to continue planning for his program which he dubbed "workfare." Nixon has asked that welfare reform start in fiscal 1974.

Of the new initiatives in the budget, the major thrust appeared to be Nixon's request to seek authority for new defense spending, and not all of it would be spent in fiscal 1973.

More For Military

Actual outlays for defense would go up by $700 million to $78.3 billion, but Nixon asked Congress to authorize him to allocate an additional $6 billion. (More on Page 3.)

The nation's overseas arms-aid program took a major cut of $200 million to a total of $750 million.

There would also be a boost in military-related economic assistance, which would go up from fiscal 1972's $584 million to $796 million.

Nixon proposed spending $3.844 billion for all international affairs programs during fiscal 1973, a cut of $116 million. That includes $1.47 billion for foreign aid, due to drop by $70 million.

Nixon said the foreign assistance program has been trimmed to the essentials, but he added that "we must not undercut the efforts to developing nations to stand on their own."

R And D Spotlights

The budget spotlighted research and development, an area that usually gains little attention. Actual R and D spending would go up by about $700 million to $61.4 billion.

But Nixon asked Congress to go beyond that and give the administration authority to spend an additional $1.4 billion.

He said this investment in science and technology in future years could be used for "the quality of American life" and economic growth in such areas as defense, space, health, transportation, energy and environment programs.

Nixon said for the first time the budget of the Health, Education and Welfare Department is bigger than that for the Defense Department. HEW's budget is estimated at $78.9 billion.

$1.1 Billion More For Elderly

The administration's spending for health programs was estimated at $18.1 billion, up by $1.1 billion.

This includes a $1.5-million boost to eliminate the monthly medicare program premium for supplemental medical insurance and to provide benefits to the disabled under 65.

The budget includes a $110 million outlay for family planning services for about 2 million women.

Nixon also urged an increase in Social Security benefits by 5%, effective in June and also asked for passage of a bill to increase Social Security benefits by the same amount as the cost of living.

He budgeted $3.5 billion to pay for the increased benefits in fiscal 1973. Social Security outlays would thus rise to $44.7 billion in fiscal 1973, up from $39.3 billion in the current period.

Mahon Sees Try To Conceal Deficit

Washington (UPI) — Warning that a tax increase is inevitable, Chairman George H. Mahon of the House Appropriations Committee charged Monday that President Nixon tried to "sugar coat" his new budget to hide record deficit spending.

His colleague, Speaker Carl Albert, said he found it "most unfortunate" that Nixon, faced with a "sick economy," had recommended spending cuts in some areas of public health, housing, education, antipollution and economic development.

Republicans, on the other hand, defended Nixon's proposed plan to continue spending at levels exceeding income as — in the President's own words — "Strong but necessary medicine" to balance the economy.

Delivering the Democrats' strongest attack, Mahon told the House that Nixon had exhausted every device left to hide the fact that the government will run $44.7 billion deeper in debt this year.

This means, the veteran Texas lawmaker said, that to avoid "fiscal collapse" taxes must be raised to pay for the cost of government.

Mahon's $44.7 billion figure, as compared to Nixon's estimate of $38.8 billion for this year, resulted from the congressman using an accounting method which includes in the deficit money the government borrows from federal trust funds such as Social Security.

Nixon estimated fiscal 1973's red ink at $25.5 billion, but Mahon's bookkeeping system boosted that figure to $36.2 billion.

"I really feel that the President is on the wrong track," Albert said. He predicted that Congress this year, as it did last year, will seek to increase Nixon's recommendations in spending for domestic programs.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Congress would debate the budget request, "especially the promiscuous increase of billions for defense, when what we really need is billions for schools and homes and health if we are ever to meet our true priorities for the spending of federal dollars."

Revised Penal Reform Bill Rushed To Floor

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee Monday rushed to the floor for debate a revised bill calling for implementation of a comprehensive penal reform program over the next three years.

The bill, LB1119, a product of the legislative study on law enforcement, was dispatched to the floor on a 5-0 vote along with a committee request seeking expeditious action from the full Legislature.

Reform programs are to be implemented as they are developed over the next three years; annual progress reports are to be submitted to each legislative session, and 1974 is established as the target date for full implementation.

The final deadline for action was set at April 30, 1975.

Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, committee chairman, and Walter Radcliffe, research assistant, were directed to go to Washington at the earliest appropriate time to seek federal funding for the package.

The committee expects to ask the full Legislature for a state appropriation not to exceed $20,000 to match federal financing for the study.

Radcliffe said the Legislature needs to "develop priorities, choose alternatives and adopt strategies" as it implements the reform plan.

Much of the preliminary work toward developing a plan has already been done, he said.

LB1119 should produce "a plan that can be implemented by 1974," Radcliffe said.

And there should be "no difficulty" in obtaining federal funds to help develop the program, he noted.

Penal Complex Warden Charles Wolf endorsed the proposal, suggesting that this action will mark the first time "we finally take a total look" at penal reform.

There was no opposition testimony.

Also sent to the floor for action was LB1120, which establishes proceedings whereby courts can waive the prepayment of fees and costs of security by an individual litigant who proves his indigence to the court.

Such fees would be paid by the county — a proviso which drew the opposition of Arnold Ruhnke, representing the Nebraska Association of County Officials.

LB1120 implements a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision, Luedtke said, and is already recognized by some counties, including Lancaster.

"This is essentially a law and order bill," Bruce Hamilton, director of the Legal Aid Society of Lincoln, told the committee.

"It will allow any citizen with a legitimate legal claim to have his day in court."

"It will show that the doors of our courts are open to all, be they rich or be they poor."

NU Students Give $32,000 To PACE

Student and administration spokesmen at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Monday said they were pleased with student response to a voluntary fund-raising program for low-income scholarships.

First semester students contributed more than $32,000 to the effort, known as PACE, according to Ed Lundak, director of the UNL office of scholarships and financial aids.

Lundak told a news conference that 60 students who otherwise "would not be in school now" were aided during the first semester with grants from a $19,000 fund authorized for use last summer.

Lundak said the money was authorized for use by the university comptroller in anticipation of the amount which would be raised during the tuition payment period.

About $13,000 remains in the PACE fund, said Lundak, and he added most of that will be held to help students this fall.

Under the plan, approved by the NU Board of Regents as a one-year trial, $3.50 is added to each student's tuition and fees bill.

A note on the tuition statement, to be mailed to students this semester about Feb. 1, explains that students may subtract the amount from their bill if they don't wish to pay it.

About one-third of the first semester students okayed the contribution, according to Steve Fowler, president of the UNL student body and one of the originators of the PACE program.

Fowler and Lundak were joined at the news conference by UNL Interim Student Affairs Dean Ely Meyerson, who said his contact with administrators on other campuses indicates PACE is "one of the most unique" programs of its kind in the nation.

Meyerson said he believes it unique because contributions

Searcy To Seek Demo Nomination For Senate

Donald Searcy of Kearney has informed Democratic officials and workers that he plans to take a leave-of-absence from his faculty position at Kearney State College to seek the Democratic senatorial nomination.

"I have decided to run for the Senate," he wrote them in a letter released Monday.

"I will take a leave-of-absence at Kearney about March 1 and will devote much time to Omaha and Lincoln."

Searcy, the Third District Democratic congressional nominee in 1970, had considered seeking a rematch this year with Republican Rep. Dave Martin.

But, he told Democrats, "it is questionable whether Mr. Martin is beatable. Without question, Carl Curtis is more vulnerable."

Nader Says Nixonites Raised Milk Support For Political Gain

©The New York Times

Washington — Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, accused the Nixon administration in a lawsuit filed here Monday of "improperly and unlawfully" raising the federal price support level for milk in return for $322,500 in contributions from the dairy industry to various Republican campaign committees.

The suit said most of the receiving committees had been created covertly, with opaque or misleading names, to bank the milk money "for the renomination and/or re-election of the incumbent president, Richard M. Nixon."

The Nader suit charged that the price support increase — a reversal that followed by two weeks an Agriculture Department decision not to raise the milk subsidy — had been granted illegally in March 1971 for "extraneous" political reasons and under "improper and unlawful influences."

White House Huddle

The crucial "influence," which preceded by days or weeks a sudden outpouring of nearly one third of a million dollars in dairy industry contributions to the Republicans, was described in the suit as a White House meeting on March 23 at which Nixon and former agriculture secretary Clifford Hardin met with a dozen dairy leaders.

The suit asked the U.S. District Court here to rescind the milk support increase as motivated for partisan financial gain and therefore "null and void."

As a result of the milk price increase, Nader's formal complaint said, committees to finance the 1972 Nixon campaign were subsequently made $322,500 richer by the contributions of three national dairy marketing cooperatives.

Until then, the suit said, the dairy contributions had been going chiefly to influential Democrats, including Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, both contenders for the presidency this year. Humphrey was disclosed to have received $15,625 in 1970 and 1971 from the dairymen — $5,200 during last December, alone — and Muskie $3,936 in 1970.

Rush To Sponsor

Exhibits attached to the Nader complaint asserted that Humphrey and Muskie, together with 11 other senators (all but one of them — Ted Stevens of Alaska — Democrats) and 47 representatives (all but 14 of them Democrats) who had received contributions from the milk men, had rushed last March to sponsor a spate of bills in Congress at the dairy industry's request that would have raised the milk subsidy.

But the brunt of the accusations in the Nader suit fell upon the Republican administration. The suit said the administration's decision — "influenced" by the dairy contributions — had raised the cost of milk products to consumers by millions of dollars a year.

The additional, indirect cost to taxpayers through greater government milk subsidy payments to the dairy farmers who financed the Republican campaign gifts, was estimated in the suit to be likely to reach $126.2 million annually by June 30, 1972.

$2.4 Million On Hand

Also likely to go up, the Nader suit suggested, were further large donations to Republicans from the three dairy industry "political education" trusts named in the complaint. As of Jan. 1, they were said to have more than $2.4 million on hand and ready to disburse to campaign treasuries.

The three trusts were listed as:

—TAPE, the Trust for Agricultural Political Education, an arm of Associated Milk Producers, Inc., of San Antonio, Tex.

—SPACE, the Trust for Special Political Agricultural Community Education, of Dairymen, Inc., a milk co-op based in Louisville, Ky.

—ADEPT, the Agricultural and Dairy Educational Political Trust, of Mid-America Dairies, Inc., with headquarters in Springfield, Mo.

who financed the Republican campaign gifts, was estimated in the suit to be likely to reach $126.2 million annually by June 30, 1972.

$2.4 Million On Hand

Also likely to go up, the Nader suit suggested, were further large donations to Republicans from the three dairy industry "political education" trusts named in the complaint. As of Jan. 1, they were said to have more than $2.4 million on hand and ready to disburse to campaign treasuries.

The three trusts were listed as:

—TAPE, the Trust for Agricultural Political Education, an arm of Associated Milk Producers, Inc., of San Antonio, Tex.

—SPACE, the Trust for Special Political Agricultural Community Education, of Dairymen, Inc., a milk co-op based in Louisville, Ky.

—ADEPT, the Agricultural and Dairy Educational Political Trust, of Mid-America Dairies, Inc., with headquarters in Springfield, Mo.

Bhutto Switches Stand

Karachi, Pakistan — President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto reversed his stand against Pakistan's financial elite and appealed for the help of businessmen in rebuilding the war-shattered economy. He also announced that no new categories of industry would be nationalized and released from detention three industrialists charged with holding foreign exchange outside the country illegally.

$246.3 Billion Proposed

Washington — President Nixon sent Congress a proposed budget of $246.3 billion for fiscal year 1973 that contains an estimated deficit of $25.5 billion. (More on Page 1.)

Cereal Monopoly Charged

Washington — Four food manufacturers

were accused by the Federal Trade Commission of illegally monopolizing the breakfast cereal market and thus forcing consumers to pay inflated prices. (More on Page 2.)

Political Milk Move Scored

Washington — The Nixon administration was accused by Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, in a lawsuit filed in Washington, of illegally raising the federal price support for milk in return of $322,500 in campaign contributions from the dairy industry. (More on Page 1.)

EEOC Proposal Delayed

Washington — A proposal to give strong enforcement powers to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission was delayed in the Senate when administration opponents, who had prevailed in early votes on the measure, saw their strength dissipate when Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson left the floor to go campaigning for the presidency.

Woman Last Seen Dec. 28

New York — The woman who opened a Swiss bank account under the name "H. R.

Hughes" was last seen in the bank Dec. 28, some three weeks after the purported autobiography of Howard R. Hughes was denounced by Hughes as a "hoax." The woman, who deposited and then withdrew $50,000 paid by McGraw-Hill Inc. for materials on Hughes, identified herself as Helga Hughes.

Welfare Limitation Invalid

Washington — Decisions by special federal district courts striking down "emergency" laws passed by New York and Connecticut that barred welfare aid to persons who had not lived in the state for one year were upheld by the Supreme Court. (More on Page 2.)

Welfare Residency Ban Upheld

... 3 ALLEGED DRUG PRICE FIXERS WIN NEW TRIAL

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court ordered a new trial Monday for three big drug firms convicted of conspiring to fix prices, and let stand rulings that keep New York and Connecticut from using a loophole to impose residency requirements on welfare recipients.

By a 3-3 tie vote the court upheld an appeals court ruling setting aside the 1967 conviction of Chas. Pfizer, American Cyanamid and Bristol-Meyers Cos.

The Justice Department had called the suit "one of the most important criminal antitrust cases in recent years." The government claimed that American Cyanamid, for instance, sold for $30,000 a quantity of tetracycline that cost only $1.52 to produce.

Fined $150,000 Each

After the 1967 trial, which followed years of court litigation and congressional investigation of antibiotic pricing, the firms were fined $150,000 each and agreed to pay $82.5 million in partial settlement of customer suits.

But the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals set aside the conviction in April 1970 on grounds the trial judge erred by overemphasizing "the more inflammatory issues of illegally exorbitant prices charged to a victimized public and patent fraud."

The New York and Connecticut ruling grew out of the Supreme Court's major 1969 decision that state residency requirements for welfare recipients are unconstitutional unless the state can show a "compelling government interest."

HEW Says Loophole

Under this provision — the Department of Health, Education and Welfare called it a loophole — both New York and

Connecticut claimed that rising costs and increasing numbers of recipients forced them to impose a one-year residency requirement to trim the welfare rolls.

In its brief to the Supreme Court, Connecticut had asked "whether it is better to have some restriction, such as a residency requirement, and thus be able to keep up with a high level of payments, or have no residency requirements and enter into a race with sister states to see which state can maintain first place in the lowest level of benefits..."

In other actions, the court:

—Refused to stay the effect of a decision requiring broadcasting stations to accept paid advertising on controversial issues. It will decide later this term whether to hear an appeal which would reverse a regulation set by the Federal Communications Commission.

—Let stand the 1971 Mississippi state legislative elections, in which only one black was elected, but said a court-ordered reapportionment plan would have to be restudied before the next election in 1975.

—Ordered new arguments be heard this spring in the bribery conviction of former Sen. Daniel B. Brewster, D-Md., but refused to review the extortion conviction of Alabama's former attorney general Richmond M. Flowers and two others.

—Agreed to decide how a lower court should have determined the voluntariness of a Missouri prison inmate accused of murdering another inmate in a riot.

Russia Recognizes Bangladesh

Moscow (AP) — The Soviet Union has granted diplomatic recognition to Bangladesh, becoming the most powerful nation so far to give its blessing to the nation carved from Pakistan by war.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported early Tuesday that President Nikolai V. Podgorniy and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin telegraphed the Kremlin's decision to Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman in Dacca.

"We convey to you and to the people of Bangladesh friendly wishes of peace, well-being and success," they told the sheik, "in consolidating the state sovereignty of your country, in building a peaceful democratic republic."

The Soviet step had been expected after diplomatic recognition extended by several Communist countries in Eastern Europe. It followed consistent Soviet support for India in the India-Pakistan war which gave birth to Bangladesh.

Throughout the U.N. Security Council's consideration of the two-week war last month, the Soviet Union and India insisted that a Bangladesh representative get a chance to speak. But the matter never came to a vote.

India led the way in diplomatic recognition for Bangladesh once the secessionist government set up shop under the protection of the Indian army. Bhutan, a small nation whose foreign relations are guided by New Delhi, followed.

Since then, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, East Germany, Poland, Barbados, Burma, Nepal and Mongolia have announced recognition. Four Scandinavian countries say they plan to do so when other Western nations make up their minds.

The United States, which backed Pakistan in the war with India, has not granted recognition. The Bangladesh foreign minister, Abdul Samad Azad, said Monday he hoped Washington's endorsement would come "sooner than expected."

Recognition by the Nixon administration would "reflect public opinion in the United States on Bangladesh," he added in a statement in Dacca.

Guerrilla 'Tiger' Gives Up Arms

Tangail, Bangladesh (AP) — Bangladesh's most flamboyant guerrilla leader surrendered his men's arms to Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman on Monday in a ceremony to dramatize government control over the countryside.

"I took up arms when called by my leader," said 24-year-old

Abdul Kader Siddique—the "Tiger of Tangail." "Now I give up my arms as my leader orders."

Nearly 3,000 weapons were neatly stacked for Sheik Mujib's inspection, but how much substance there was to the ceremony was uncertain.

Israelis Swoop Into Syria

Tel Aviv (AP) — Israeli warplanes swooped 25 miles inside neighboring Syria Monday, rocketing and strafing Arab guerrilla camps near Dar'a, Syria's major southern city, the Israeli military command reported.

The air strikes followed "increased terrorist activity from Syrian territory aimed at Israeli citizens," a command spokesman said. Israel has reported 14 Arab guerrilla raids this month on the simmering Syrian frontier.

The Israeli command said its jets scored direct hits on the tents where "several hundred terrorists" were camped.

Radio Damascus, however, said Syrian aircraft and ground gunners drove off the attackers before any casualties or damage had been inflicted.

Coed Named To Naval Academy By Sen. Javits

Washington (UPI) — Terminating the U.S. Naval Academy's men-only policy "anachronistic," Sen. Jacob K. Javits Monday nominated a 17-year-old New York coed for admission to the midshipmen class of 1972 at Annapolis.

Javits' choice, Miss Barbara Jo Brimmer of Staatsburg, N.Y., was the second nominee to challenge the Naval Academy's admissions code.

Rep. Jack McDonald, R-Mich., has already nominated Valerie Schoen, 18, of Redford, Mich., a student at the University of Michigan.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Breakfast Food Makers Charged

Washington (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) accused four manufacturers Monday of illegally monopolizing the breakfast cereal business by a complex system of overpricing, false advertising and keeping competitors out.

The FTC proposed that at least some of the four firms be broken up, that the "big four" license some brands or trademarks free, and that they stop all anti-competitive practices including false advertising and control of grocery shelf space.

Named in the complaint were the Kellogg Co., Battle Creek, Mich.; General Mills Inc., Minneapolis, Minn.; General Foods Corp., (Post Cereal), White Plains, N.Y.; and the Quaker Oats Co., Chicago.

90% Control

The FTC said these four firms control 90% of the $650 million annual ready-to-eat breakfast cereal business.

Two smaller producers, Nabisco, Inc., N.Y., and Ralston Purina Co., St. Louis, Mo., were not named in the action although the FTC said they "contributed by acquiescence to the noncompetitive structure of the cereal market."

Kellogg, the largest producer with 45% of the cereal market, strongly denying the FTC allegations.

Alan Ward, director of the FTC's Bureau of Competition, told a news conference that the case was the first in which false advertising had been cited to support antitrust action. The FTC said cereal advertisements falsely imply that breakfast cereals help children in sports.

Dieter's Aid

It said Kellogg, General Mills and General Foods also falsely advertised that their cereals would help fat people lose weight.

Ward said one FTC study concluded that cereal prices would be "20 to 25 lower under competitive conditions."

The FTC said the four companies kept prices up by never undercutting each others' price hikes.

With the help of high advertising expenditures, the FTC said, the four companies "artificially differentiate their ready-to-eat cereals."

Respondents produce basically similar ready-to-eat cereals, and then emphasize and exaggerate trivial variations such as color and shape," the FTC said. "Respondents employ trademarks to conceal such basic similarities and to differentiate cereal brands."

The FTC said Kellogg largely controlled the shelf space allotted to various cereals in grocery stores, restricting Nabisco and Ralston displays and removing cereals made by "small regional producers."

Four Strikes Hit No. Viets

have carried out four "protective reaction" strikes in one day against anti-aircraft sites in North Vietnam — the greatest number for a single day since the bombing halt in 1968, the U.S. Command reported Monday.

A protective reaction strike is made by an aircraft when it or others are fired upon or threatened from inside North Vietnam.

The U.S. Command disclosed the four protective reaction strikes came on Saturday. It also said U.S. planes dodged five anti-aircraft missiles fired at them over Laos on Sunday, in a continuing enemy attempt to prevent American air strikes in Laos and against North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh supply trail.

Nixon Asks More For Military

By WILLIAM BEECHER
Washington — President Nixon asked Monday for authority to spend $83.4 billion for the Defense Department, an increase of $6.3 billion over the request for the current budget year. The new request markedly accelerates a rising trend in the military budget that began last year, after two years of decline.

The principal factors driving the budget upward, Pentagon analysts declared, are:

- A major stepup in a program to develop a new family of missile submarines in response to a mounting Soviet buildup.
- A program to buy modern ships, planes and tanks, the purchase of which was largely deferred during the height of the Vietnam war.
- A total of $4.1 billion in pay increases aimed at attaining an all-volunteer armed force by mid-summer 1973, as pledged by Nixon in his first presidential campaign.

$7 Billion Later
Actual spending during the fiscal year starting July 1 would total $76.5 billion, up $700 million from the estimate for the current fiscal year. The balance of the authorization, nearly $7 billion, would be spent during future years as weapons ordered under this budget would come off production lines.

In a news briefing, Defense Secretary Melvin Laird noted that Congress had cut about $3 billion from this year's defense authorization request. But he insisted that the new request, plus $254.8 million being sought in a supplemental appropriation, "asks for the absolute minimum amount necessary to safeguard our national security."

The new requests present the Democrats, who control Congress, with a political problem.

If they continue the trend of recent years of sharply cutting the defense budget, they run the risk of being blamed during the election campaign for contributing to continued high unemployment in the defense industries and for allowing the Russians to build stronger forces than the United States. If the Democrats fail to vigorously challenge some of the costly military programs, they face possible attack for giving only lip service to efforts to reallocate resources away from defense into a variety of domestic welfare programs.

Officially the Pentagon refused to estimate the anticipated cost of the war in Indochina during the coming fiscal year, but one well-placed source said it would probably fall to about $3.2 billion from the $6.5 billion estimated for the current fiscal year ending June 30. The estimate includes only costs directly traceable to the war, such as bombs dropped.

Strategic weapons of all kinds account for an increase of about $1.2 billion in the new budget and most of the $254.8 million supplementary request.

Much of the increase is concentrated in a $942 million request to develop a new 4,000-mile submarine-launched missile and a larger, quieter new submarine to carry from 20 to 30 missiles. Current Polaris submarines carry 15 missiles with a range of about 3,000 miles.

The administration also seeks permission, rejected last year, to start construction at the third and fourth Safeguard antimissile sites, as well as increased funds to step up development of the B-1 strategic bomber, to increase the pace of converting single-warhead Minuteman and Polaris missiles to those with multiple warheads; and to buy larger, more advanced planes from which the President and his aides could control U.S. retaliatory forces in the event of nuclear war.

To provide more modern equipment for the nonnuclear forces, the budget calls for retiring one of the Navy's old aircraft carriers, the Wasp, but seeks funds for components of a new nuclear-powered carrier, 6 nuclear-powered antisubmarine U-boats, 8 destroyers, and 42 SA-3 sub-hunting aircraft.

The Air Force, similarly, would get its first funds to purchase 30 F15 jet fighters; the Army, money for 166 more M60 tanks and an unspecified number of new Dragon antitank missiles, and the Marines, funds for its first procurement of the improved Hawk antiaircraft missile.

Research and development, particularly on strategic command and control and weapons systems, is budgeted to rise $1 billion.

Reserve and National Guard forces are slated, under the request, for an increase of $600 million, much of that devoted to more modern planes, tanks and trucks.

Subsidies To Farmers Will Climb

Washington (UPI) — Direct subsidy payments to farmers for leaving land idle will rise by more than $1.1 million next year as the government tries to hold down production in the wake of record grain crops. But the automatic reduction in the amount of money needed to pay price supports on the crops that are grown will more than offset the increase.

This was disclosed Monday in the Agriculture Department portion of President Nixon's proposed budget for fiscal 1973, which starts July 1. The budget showed that Agriculture Department spending, even with the sharp "layout" subsidy outlays, would dip $905 million below the current $11 billion level.

Food aid programs administered by the department, including food stamps and surplus commodities, will rise $269 million to $4.1 billion.

Some cuts, or failure to propose increases, were expected to bring protests from farmers and some congressmen. For example, Nixon proposed trimming authorizations for the popular Rural Environmental Assistance Program, a conservation subsidy, from $195.5 million to $140 million.

He also proposed a $10 million cut in the $93 million school milk subsidy program and refused to propose any increase in rural electrification loans.

Over-all farm support spending under the new budget was estimated at $4.374 billion compared with $4.546 billion for the current year.

Wealth Shifting Toward Rich With Nixon, Woodcock Says

Washington (UPI) — United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock said Monday distribution of the nation's wealth under President Nixon has shifted toward the rich, and Congress ought to have "the gumption and backbone" to defy the administration and reverse this trend.

"They were not elected to the Congress to be the handmaidens of Mr. Nixon," he told a UAW political action meeting. "They were elected to represent the people of the United States."

The UAW president said Nixon had given huge tax breaks to business and the wealthy and proposed further tax advantages for them, yet was considering a value added tax that in the long run would be passed on to the consumer in higher prices.

And he said wage earners can expect even higher taxes because of Nixon's "swollen budget," the social needs the government needs to meet and the "reluctance of Congress and the administration to tackle the wastage in military spending."

Instead of trying to stimulate the economy by giving tax breaks to business, Woodcock said the government ought to be increasing the purchasing power of ordinary citizens, including making the government "the employer of last resort" for persons who can't find work in the private economy.

"We want to restore confidence, build up from the bottom because it works and not trickle down from the top because it doesn't work," Woodcock told several hundred delegates to the union meeting.

He said income distribution since World War II had been shifting toward the lower end of the scale, but began moving toward the wealthy when President Nixon took office in 1969. He said the top one percent on the income scale now receive 6.8% of the personal income, more than twice as much as the lower 20% of the people.

Woodcock said jobs for the unemployed was the nation's most important domestic need. He said one way to increase jobs was to require double payment for overtime because it was now cheaper for companies to work employees overtime at time-and-a-half than it was to hire new workers.

Outer Planets 'Grand Tour' Scrubbed In NASA Budget

Washington (UPI) — President Nixon scrubbed the Space Agency's ambitious plan for an $1 billion unmanned "grand tour" of the outer planets Monday and proposed spending more of its money for research on airplanes.

The $3.2 billion budget Nixon proposed for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) was virtually unchanged from spending in the current fiscal year that ends June 30.

The most dramatic cutback was in NASA's plan to send an unmanned spacecraft on a grand tour of Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto when these planets assume a rare alignment late in this century. Lack of support from the scientific community was a contributing factor in its elimination.

Nixon also cancelled a program to build a 750-million-pound thrust nuclear rocket engine that might have one day been used for a manned flight to Mars. He replaced it with a proposal to develop a far smaller, 15,000 pound thrust engine for unmanned planetary missions.

But in aeronautics research, which has taken a back seat for years to the more glamorous space projects, the President proposed increasing spending by about 50%.

He requested $163.4 million to try to quiet the noise of aircraft engines, build a new type of short takeoff airplane and join with the Army in research on a vertical-takeoff plane. This year aeronautics research received only $110 million.

In place of the "grand tour," Nixon called for a start toward developing manned probes to fly by Jupiter and observe it in passing.

Nixon's budget called for two final remaining Apollo missions, both scheduled for Moon landings this year. For 1973, he asked Congress to continue a program to develop an embryonic space station with $541 million additional funds.

The President asked $220 million for the space shuttle program, in which contracts are expected to be awarded this summer. This doubled the amount provided for the shuttle this year.

Medicare Takeover Asked

Washington (UPI) — President Nixon asked Congress Monday to assume the $1.5 billion annual cost that the nation's elderly now pay for Medicare coverage of doctor bills.

"A new commitment to the aging is long overdue to add dignity and usefulness to their lives," Nixon said in his budget message. Under present law, the monthly optional medicare premium, payable by the beneficiary, is supposed to reflect medical costs and it is scheduled to rise from $5.60 to $5.80 in July.

Nixon proposed an increase in payroll taxes to make up the $1.5 billion that the elderly now pay.

Nixon said he wanted to spend $50 billion next year on behalf of the aging, an increase of $16 billion over four years.

Among his proposals: —A fivefold increase over 1972 spending to $100 million for the Administration on Aging to provide more homemaker services, home health aides, transportation and nutrition services to keep the aged in their own homes.

—Social Security and welfare benefits proposed in the House-passed welfare reform bill, which is pending in the Senate, which would add $5.5 billion to income of the elderly.

Nixon Asks More For Military

By WILLIAM BEECHER
 Washington — President Nixon asked Monday for authority to spend $83.4 billion for the Defense Department, an increase of $6.3 billion over the request for the current budget year. The new request markedly accelerates a rising trend in the military budget that began last year, after two years of decline.

The principal factors driving the budget upward, Pentagon analysts declared, are:

- A major stepup in a program to develop a new family of missile submarines in response to a mounting Soviet buildup.

EVENTS

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

In the winter of 1945, the Nebraska Legislature, among other things, was attempting to name an official state tree. Today, due to the decline of the American elm, the 1972 Legislature is trying to do the same thing.

An interested party in 1945 was the noted Nebraska author, Mari Sandoz. The Nebraska State Historical Society has unearthed a communication written at that time by Miss Sandoz, advocating the cottonwood as the state tree.

Her communication first appeared in public in the news columns of The Lincoln Star, then under the editorial direction of a friend and fellow writer, the late James E. Lawrence. The plea by Miss Sandoz for the cottonwood did not prevail then but perhaps her eloquence at that time will now bear fruit.

She wrote: "The cottonwood has always been the favored tree of man and beast in the trans-Missouri country, whether standing in golden, sheltering groves along our autumn streams or as great lone trees that shaded the oriole's swinging nest and the deer and buffalo from the heat of summer. The beaver used it to build his dam and to grow the fine felt that clothed and adorned generations of the fashionable."

"To the Indian it was firewood and winter feed for his pony, its leaves and thin twigs a smokeless and almost odorless fire for his war parties. To the Sioux it was also the wakan tree, furnishing the holy pole for his sun dance that was to bring unity and courage to the people and make the buffalo many and fat for the hunt."

"To the early fur hunters it was the landmark and wood and shelter, too, and material or rafts to float his cache to market. To the Overlander it was cheer and shade, wood for fire, logs to buoy his wagons over swollen streams and ferries and bridges to carry them over while the hollow of its trunk was the trail postoffice where letters could be left to be picked up by travelers going the other way. Treaties were signed in the shade of the cottonwood, soldier stockades built of its logs, and frozen feet warmed by its fire."

"To the early settler, the cottonwood was also a landmark and cheer and a promise that there was water in the earth for crops and animals and men. Its wood fed his campfire, built his loghouses, furnished ridge poles for his soddies, furniture for his dugouts . . .

"The cottonwood grows anywhere in our region and its seedlings are available by the thousands in any community. They fur the sandbars of our rivers, sprout in low places along the highways, come up along the stock tanks and on the lawns, and if you can't come by a seedling to plant in the spring, a cutting with a few buds will do. Set into moist ground, it will shade your dog the first year; you and your family in two years."

"Plant the trees close and if there is one among you who is fussy about the silk that flies for a few days in the year, cut the offending young trees out and you will have enough. Properly spaced, the cottonwood can live a long time. A few of the old trees of the 1880s along the upper Niobrara were still there in the thirties, magnificent, noble trees, the kind that were praised in the writings of eastern travelers and visiting noblemen going up the Platte a hundred years ago."

"And suppose those you plant don't live to shade the mouldering graves of your grandchildren? In the summer evenings their leaves will rustle a drowsy song for you and in the winter they will glisten as no other tree on the icy mornings; the redness of the setting sun will linger in their tops, caught in the rivers, you will see a yellowing glow in the tips, a promise of spring, of another good year to come."

"Why not the cottonwood?"

At this point, the cottonwood has received other endorsements, including that of the Nebraska Association of Nurserymen and the original legislative sponsor of the green ash. There may be a more perfect tree than the cottonwood but none more appropriate as the official tree of the Cornhusker state.

Lady Libbers Resent Hurricanes' Names

NEW YORK — Mrs. Roxcy Bolton, liberationist, is trying again to kick up a storm because hurricanes are named after women!

She blew into the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's hurricane-planning conference and demanded that female names be taken off 1972's tropical storms — and the names of U.S. senators be substituted. Her theory, though she didn't mention it, probably is that senators' names are appropriate because senators tend to move slowly and circuitously, and they also blow off a lot.

Mrs. Bolton, whose first name "Roxcy" eliminates her from even the most exotic hurricane lists, also suggested that any storm with winds over 130 mph be dubbed "him-icane."

"As long as people can name 'her-icane' after us, it's just another way of putting women down," she explained, adding: "I'm sick and tired of hearing that 'Cheryl was no lady as she devastated such and such a town,' or 'Betsey annihilated this or that.'"

The scientists, while giving her a chilly reception, were doubtless envisioning their own headlines as they listened to her pleas . . . "Unpredictable him-icane Teddy tore into Texas today . . ." or "Tropical storm Edmund swirled up the East Coast last night . . ." Not bad.

The males who heard Mrs. Bolton's urgings indicated that there was some justice in her appeal to drop female names in regard to natural tempests, but would give no promises of change.

Not one of them had the questionable taste, apparently, to mention that female names are more appropriate because, after all, hurricanes are the product of Mother (rather than Father) Nature.

But Dr. Karl Johannessen, associate director of the National Weather Service, threw Roxcy Bolton a bone, saying that perhaps it would be wise if the names of men were to be used one year, and the names of women used during alternate years.

I think it would be even better to have a pre-season drawing every year. For each lettered hurricane, three male and three female names could be thrown in a hat, and one of them drawn.

To make it absolutely fair, the drawing should be executed by a Ringling Bros. half man-half woman — using both hands.

That way, the whole thing would be left up to Dame (not Sir) Fortune!

I am reminded of the words of Dr. Joseph Peck, who addressed the men of America — long before the Women's Lib movement — thusly:

"I would advise you, my gentlemen friends, to study woman as does an anthropologist — part by part, action by action, mood by mood. And perhaps, then, you will eventually come up with some idea about just what makes your woman react as she does."

"She is superior to you in most every way except brute force and long-range thinking."

"She is more tender than you, and yet more cruel, more yielding and yet more determined, more innocent and yet more filled with guile, and firm in her belief that anything you can do, she can do better. And damn it, too often she is right!"

Cloud Over Exon's Head

One might think that among disgruntled taxpayers, Gov. J. James Exon stands high in popularity. But reports that see now and then out of outstate Nebraska do not bear out such thinking.

It appears very possible that Governor Exon might suffer in any re-election bid some of the same fate that fell to former Gov. Norbert Tiemann. Among other things, Tiemann was hurt by dissatisfaction over the growing property tax rate.

The current dispute over the personal property tax is not the same thing as real property taxation but the two are easily mixed up in the minds of voters. What the personal property hassle does is put the spotlight on taxes and the light appears to shine brightly on all kinds.

Thus, controversy over the personal property tax spills over into discussion of real property taxation. Right or wrong — and it is the latter — the governor cannot escape the consequences of this.

Exon has done a commendable job of trying to separate governmental responsibilities in the tax field but his efforts are constantly diluted by the school aid advocates. Now, the federal government may be coming more dominantly into the picture.

President Nixon has talked of local property tax relief through expanded federal aid to education. But the difficulty of all such aid, at both state and federal levels, is that it contains no guarantee of relief at the local property tax level.

While all such forms of aid have increased in recent years, the level of local property taxation has continued to go up, not down. Some maintain that it would be higher yet were it not for state and federal aid but that is a theoretical matter pitted against the fact of higher and higher property tax levies.

The property tax, it seems, grows constantly more unpopular and we wonder if the day might come when it is made a relic of the past at all levels of government. In the meantime, it will continue to be a thorn in the side of public officials at all levels of government, whether they are directly responsible for it or not.

VD Into The Millions

National figures indicate some two million current cases of gonorrhea, half a million cases of syphilis and the latter growing to the tune of 85,000 a year. It all adds up to what many authorities describe as a VD epidemic.

Nebraska is no exception, having 267 cases of gonorrhea and 1.6 cases of syphilis per 100,000 of population. Currently, the Nebraska Legislature is considering a law that would allow the treatment of VD patients under 20 years of age without notification by doctors of parents.

The proposal relates to one of the VD problems—the hesitancy of getting medical attention because of the social stigma of the disease. The only way to communicate the disease is through intercourse.

There may be some value to the Nebraska proposal in that it might help obtain proper care in cases where care might otherwise not be provided. But it will also be another encouragement to the kind of life in which VD has been spawned.

This is a life of sexual promiscuity, including birth control pills, easy abortions and liberal theories on family life and pre-marital sex. The tendency in this area has been that if you can't beat 'em, join 'em.

If you can't stop pre-marital sex, the pill is the next best thing. If you can't stop VD, treatment in privacy is the next best thing.

We wonder how far it will all go before we finally decide to try to reverse the trend rather than making the best of it. The best answer to VD would be a return to the old-fashioned idea that it is wrong to sleep with anybody and everybody who might be tempted or encouraged to go to bed with you.

Eventually, we are going to have to find a way of reversing rather than just dealing with moral decay that now afflicts such a large part of our population.

Malta Is Viewed By Many Different Eyes; Maltese Know 'Permanency' Of Communism

PARIS — The strategic importance of Malta is measured differently by every interested nation. For Britain the island lost much value when the British Empire was dismantled and London ceased believing that God was an Englishman and the road to India must be kept open.

However, for the United States, Malta became increasingly significant as American bases in Arab North Africa were extruded and the Sixth Fleet, covering both Israel and the East Mediterranean, could rely only on Greek harbors for support. If Malta fell into hostile hands, the Sixth Fleet would feel bottled up from behind.

Obviously both Moscow and the Arab capitals are aware of this. Russia hasn't seriously contemplated taking on responsibility in Malta since Czar Paul thought of accepting titular leadership of the island's Order of Knights. Now, however, with a strong Soviet presence in the East Mediterranean, a Maltese base would move its implicit political influence westward.

Egypt is not necessarily committed to helping Moscow gain that objective and Libya, linked with Egypt in a confederation, flatly opposes it. Nevertheless, were Malta to kick out Britain and NATO while accepting Libyan financial aid as a substitute, the Arab lands would feel that resulting embarrassment to the United States Sixth Fleet would undermine Israel's strategic position.

Italy also is acutely aware of Malta. During World War II, when British planes and ships there cut axis supply lines to North Africa, the Italians paid dearly. Italy's weak political situation is related to its exposed external position. For years successive governments have been feeble coalitions designed only to keep the massive Communist party from power.

Now that Yugoslavia rumbles with centrifugal forces in Tito's old age, the Italians fear a successor Belgrade regime with closer ties to Moscow might re-establish Soviet influence in the Adriatic. Were this accompanied by the neutralization or pro-Russian alignment of Malta, Italy could become the kernel in an ideological nutcracker.

For these reasons, the continuing Maltese crisis is of great concern. Malta and that other important island, Cyprus, are integral parts of the West by culture and tradition. Every effort should have been made to invite them to join NATO when they first became independent. But this opportunity was mishandled although Britain, a NATO partner, continued to maintain military bases in both.

Each island, with a small population, limited income and modest industrial potential, drifted into the political cross-currents between Russia and the West. Archbishop Makarios, Cypriot president from the start, was a neutralist. Malta's Prime Minister Mintoff, who gained power only last year, was sometimes called "the Mediterranean Castro."

This is unfair. He simply wants enough foreign money to finance an economic shift so that within five to seven years the island will no longer depend upon rental of its naval-air facilities and jet-fuel services to survive. This is a logical aspiration but London logically argues it isn't going to pay through the nose to guarantee its own ouster a few years hence.

This is what the argument is about. Mintoff hasn't helped his own cause by arrogance. When Chancellor Brandt, a fellow socialist, offered him a modest West German annual contribution to help the NATO cause,

Mintoff told Bonn: "I don't like bad jokes."

There is still a bargaining deadlock. British forces continue to withdraw and Mintoff has brought in Libyan and Egyptian technicians in Mufti to run his airfield. The Russians have remained tactfully quiet.

Nevertheless, it seems inevitable that Britain will be begrudgingly go along with a worried and consequently generous NATO and finance a new bases deal. Mintoff can only win by such an arrangement.

He has already shown ability to twist the tail of the decrepit British lion and hopes to pluck feathers from that of the American eagle. He knows that loans from Arab petroleum states won't produce permanent jobs for unemployed Maltese. He also knows it is easier to invite the Russians in than to get them out again.

Indeed, although the communist world has been dividing into bickering segments, it is noteworthy that with the single exception of Northwest Iran, not one inch of territory that became communist has been permitted to revert to another type of regime. The heavily Catholic Maltese are aware of this.

Missing Cat

Lincoln, Neb. We have lost our cat. Since scouring the neighborhood, advertising on two radio stations and placing an ad in the lost-and-found section of the newspaper have been to no avail, I've decided to try the editorial page.

The cat is a short-haired, black and white male, about six or seven months old. He has no collar and has had all shots that are required. The cat has little value other than being loved by our daughter.

Not only are we anxious to have our cat back for this reason, but also because the cat is on medication. After several trips to the veterinarian, he determined that he could possibly be a mild epileptic. He does have seizures occasionally and the medication he is on was controlling these seizures.

The cat disappeared on Thursday evening, January 13, from our home in Wellington Greens, which is in the vicinity of 70th and South.

It would greatly relieve us to find out something about our cat. Our phone number is 489-1295.

Freedom Of Choice

Lincoln, Neb. Is Nebraska giving the independent voters freedom of choice at the polls? Does that mean the Republicans and Democrats will still adhere to party ticket without freedom of choice? Republicans could have only the list of Republican candidates and the Democrats, the Democratic ballots in the past.

I'll register as an independent so I can have freedom of choice regardless of what political party the candidate is for. It will save me registering before the primary every year so I can make my vote count.

Horse Barns

Hickman, Neb. Three cheers everything the Nelson girls and their father said in regard to the 4-H's giving up the horse barn in favor of a fieldhouse. I have been a 4-H leader for three years and my children have been in 4-H for six years. Do people realize how many young people are involved in horse 4-H? From age nine through 19, 4-H gives them a chance to really learn about horses and to show their horses and learn how to compete and "give their all." Then when it's over, if they didn't win top ribbons, we'll hear them cheer and applaud for the guy or gal who did.

Sure, we know Nebraska is No. 1 and we want the best for our University, but must we take away from the 4-H's to do it? Remember, 4-H reaches them at a much younger age and could just make a tremendous difference in the life of a child who may never make the university, or, better yet, who might just make it because of 4-H. Let's don't discourage them by putting their interests way down on the list.

For any who think I am talking about a limited number of children, I invite them to call the county extension office and see how many people, young and older, are involved in 4-H. Then check and see how many enter the county horse show alone. And then check how many young people bring their horses from all over the state to the State Fair 4-H horse show. It will be surprising.

We don't want to be written off. We need that horse barn at least as much as the university needs a fieldhouse. To us it is important.

4-H 'HORSE LEADER'

Someone Older

Lincoln, Neb. I just wonder how Dr. Miele would feel if his retarded child were spanked until she had bruises. Wouldn't he want to be informed? Would he believe the person who reported the incident belonged to the "divisive forces"?

Anyone who has a child, teenager or adult in any of the hostels must be concerned. A 21-year-old house-mother! Age doesn't guarantee a good house parent but I should think the odds would be greater if someone older were hired.

CONCERNED CITIZEN

Stuart Changes

Lincoln, Neb. It can't be true! I was shocked to hear of plans to close the Stuart Theater on April 30 for a complete remodeling of its interior, which includes lowering the ceiling halfway down.

Over the years, I have sat in the Stuart Theater and marveled at its fantastic interior. Those huge, ornate chandeliers glowing a soft red or blue can have an almost mystic effect on a person.

In my opinion, altering the Stuart is akin to the desecration of a cathedral.

I wonder if there are others in Lincoln and surrounding areas who feel as I do?

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have excessive salivation to the point that I awake two or three times a night and find I have to wipe my face. This has been happening for six to eight months, during the day as well as at night, but has become more frequent in the last month or two. I'm in my 70s and have worn full dentures about 20 years, but I have the habit of squeezing down on them during the day, especially in the evening when I'm reading or studying something. It's not a grinding of the dentures, but more an unconscious pressing down to squeeze the saliva out and swallow. When I become aware of it I try to stop and that helps for a while. Even though his pressure action has been practiced just about all the years I've worn dentures, the excessive saliva flow has started only in the last six months or so. I've wondered whether the copious salivation is a result of the constant pressure on the dentures.—H.S.

With dentures it is better to have a generous flow of saliva than a dry mouth as is rather common at your age.

Things that come to mind first in cases of excessive saliva are smoking, medications such as those containing iodine, inflammation of the mouth, and nervous disorders, chief of which is Parkinsonism.

You give no hint that any of these is involved. Keep in mind, though, that some of the complex vitamin-mineral preparations contain iodine, and you might be unduly sensitive to iodine.

You say the dentures fit comfortably; there could be a sensitivity to materials you use with the dentures. Have you changed in the last six months or so?

It is also possible that squeezing down on the dentures initiates a reflex flow of saliva. You may, perhaps, have gradually increased the habit of doing this. Think so? What happens if you do not wear the dentures at night? That could offer a clue.

If any of these suggestions turns out to be helpful, that's fine, but I can add also that there are medications to lessen salivary flow and might be tried if your physician concurs.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My sister has been suffering from a "frozen shoulder." Would you discuss this and what is your advice? She has been going to a licensed physical therapist prescribed by an orthopedist, and is now much better.—Mrs. J.C.J.

A frozen shoulder is an exceptionally stiff shoulder—the same thing can occur in other joints, too.

When the shoulder is "frozen," movement or rotation of the arm can be extremely painful, and often the amount of movement is very limited, quite apart from the pain.

The condition can result from injury, or from a disease such as bursitis, or as a result of reflex changes following a heart attack or lung disease, or from sheer inactivity of the arm and shoulder, whether as the result of a stroke or being immobilized because of a fracture. Or, of course, changes resulting from some forms of arthritis may be involved.

In any event, adhesions within the joint limit motion and make it painful—and the longer the joint is not moved because of the pain, the more "frozen" it becomes.

Rest and application of heat usually are the first measures, followed by supervised exercises, designed to loosen the joint. Injections of hydrocortisone into the joint may be necessary to lessen the pain.

In some instances, the joint may be so "frozen"—that is, so bound by adhesions—that an orthopedist may have to manipulate the joint under general anesthesia to loosen the adhesions.

Your sister evidently had good advice: she went to an orthopedist, and now, by her physical therapist's work, is gradually loosening the joint.

It is pointless to expect immediate results. The whole business takes time. Cooperation by the patient—even when it hurts—is essential.

In your sister's case, you can see progress; I trust that she's wise enough to continue.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter is planning to burn railroad ties in her fireplace. Besides the horrible odor, I think it would be bad for their lungs. These ties are treated with a preservative. I just don't think it could be used as wood in the home.—Mrs. O.G.

I can't see any harm in using that wood in a fireplace. What makes you think it would be harmful? After all, the smoke goes up the chimney.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My hands shake and seem to be getting worse. What causes this and what can I take to help me? I have been this way for about two years. — Mrs. L. C. M.

There are different causes of hand tremors, the commonest ones being Parkinson's disease, aging, and overactive thyroid. Treatment depends on what the cause is, and you will have to have your doctor diagnose the cause.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Do you think baking soda is harmful to take for sour stomach? I take it frequently. At times I also spit up a real bitter liquid and have a burning sensation in my throat. What do you think causes this? — J. E. R.

Depends on what you mean by a "sour stomach." A very occasional pinch of soda isn't going to be harmful, but it's so easy for some folks to get the "soda habit," which turns into a sort of rollercoaster. Soda combats stomach acids; nature responds by producing more acid, and it becomes a vicious circle.

From the little you've told me, I'd suspect a hiatal hernia, with nothing wrong with your stomach except that its natural acids escape upward. Best see your doctor for a reliable diagnosis.

Dr. Thosteson is happy to receive reader's questions, and whenever possible uses them in his column. However, due to the great volume of mail received daily, he regrets he cannot answer letters individually.

Yule Card Response Disappoints Retirees

By ROBERT PETERSON

Question: — "We're retired here in Florida, and with time on our hands decided to enlarge our yule card list last December. We sent cards to all our neighbors within two blocks and to lots of new people we've met. We mailed 210, instead of the usual 100. But in counting up cards received we find we only got 120. Some 90 people didn't reciprocate. Do you blame us for thinking people down here aren't very friendly?"

Answer: — You may enjoy sending and receiving yule cards, but increasing numbers of older people find it a pain in the neck. They've given up maintaining lists and trying to keep track of who did or did not send them cards; and they have discovered that real friendship is not measured by an exchange of cards but rather by personal acts of hospitality and friendliness. Yule cards serve an admirable purpose in keeping in touch with faraway friends and relatives, but they don't make much sense when sent to next door neighbors or folks we barely know. Considering the rising cost of stamps, and the shocking deficits in our postal service, many elders have happily retired from the yule card madness.

Question: — "How do you explain people who won't let anyone into their home? There is a widow about 65 on our street who has lived here 10 years. She visits other people and seems normal. But if you go to her house and knock she won't come to the door. Or if you see her outside and tell her you've come for a visit she'll say she's cleaning or painting and can't let you in. She's been to my house dozens of times and yesterday I asked point blank why she never invites anyone over and she said simply that she never entertains. It seems so inhospitable and strange. Don't you agree?"

Answer: — Sure do. But nearly everyone has at least one strange mannerism by the time he's 65 so we have to be tolerant. Her reason may have something to do with the way she keeps her house. Maybe she's a very poor housekeeper and finds more pleasure living in an unkempt, relaxed manner than she'd find keeping things neat for callers. Or she may have hermit tendencies and savors absolute privacy at home.

Question: — "I'm 66, retired last year from the import business, and discouraged. I haven't been much of a success in life — never made more than $7,000 a year, and my wife and I are squeezing by these days on little more than $200 monthly. I don't seem half so bright as my teenage grandchildren. And the other night I tried to read the U.N. charter and couldn't make head nor tail of it. Is there any reason to think I won't become increasingly inadequate?"

Answer: — Stop trying to compete with teenagers or with the eggheads who concocted the U.N. charter, and start taking a more positive attitude. Focus your energies on things you find enjoyable and can do well, whether it be hanging wallpaper or keeping the backyard hemlocks trimmed. Remind yourself that though your income is skimpy it's more than some people have and is sufficient to keep the wolf from the door. Vow to develop an absorbing avocation during 1972, such as organizing a club for other down-in-the-mouth retirees, starting an employment agency for older people, or learning a profitable hobby such as woodworking or bookbinding.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast For Tuesday

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hold off on travel. Develop ideas. Avoid premature decisions. Actions may make some unusual demands; this also applies to relatives. Be patient. Seek new avenues of expression. Stress self-reliance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Money is very much in picture; debts are paid and collected. Review financial procedures. Check assets; take inventory. Delay decision connected with large outlay of funds. Time is on your side.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What appears adverse could rebound in your favor. Delay signing of contracts; other agreements. Be certain of facts. Don't head one who merely whispers sweet nothings. That's what you could get — nothing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): One who shares your interests may be leaning too heavily. Means do your share, but don't carry extra burden. Message should become increasingly clear. Be aware of time printed read between times.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends fall out. Means some of your ideas, notions and desires may be subject to revision. Those you rely upon act in strange manner. Accept necessity for changes. Don't hold on to past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Diplomatic approach aids in achieving goal. This is no time to force issues. What you need will be offered. Give family member benefit of doubt. One in position of authority is not certain.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): People who do lots of talking now could be seeking to cover lack of knowledge. Know this and don't believe everything you hear. Be perceptive. Ask questions which enable you to perfect techniques.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stick to conservative course. Consolidate gains. Don't be tempted into giving up something for nothing. Avoid the sensational. Older individual can aid. Heed voice of experience. Money situation improves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Partnership proposals require special care, consideration. Don't go by surface appearances. Look for potential hidden clauses. One who comes to you for advice is merely probing, testing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look for new avenues of expression. You can break through red tape. Temporary restriction, confinement may be on agenda. Creative resources surge to forefront. What appears a setback may be an asset.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hunch could bring desired results. Key is to be confident. Emotions tend now to dominate. Give logic equal time. Lovers' quarrel should not be blown out of proportion. Strive for balance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Study details; be thorough. Family situation will change — in your favor. What appeared serious might actually be cause for hilarity. Don't take others — or yourself — too seriously. Play waiting game.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, a spiritual person and a natural humanitarian. Your experiences this year will range far and wide, with August indicated as a most significant month. You tend to be a perfectionist. But you never ask anyone to do what you would not attempt.

Yule cards serve an admirable purpose in keeping in touch with faraway friends and relatives, but they don't make much sense when sent to next door neighbors or folks we barely know. Considering the rising cost of stamps, and the shocking deficits in our postal service, many elders have happily retired from the yule card madness.

Question: — "How do you explain people who won't let anyone into their home? There is a widow about 65 on our street who has lived here 10 years. She visits other people and seems normal. But if you go to her house and knock she won't come to the door. Or if you see her outside and tell her you've come for a visit she'll say she's cleaning or painting and can't let you in. She's been to my house dozens of times and yesterday I asked point blank why she never invites anyone over and she said simply that she never entertains. It seems so inhospitable and strange. Don't you agree?"

Answer: — Sure do. But nearly everyone has at least one strange mannerism by the time he's 65 so we have to be tolerant. Her reason may have something to do with the way she keeps her house. Maybe she's a very poor housekeeper and finds more pleasure living in an unkempt, relaxed manner than she'd find keeping things neat for callers. Or she may have hermit tendencies and favors absolute privacy at home.

Question: — "I'm 66, retired last year from the import business, and discouraged. I haven't been much of a success in life — never made more than $7,000 a year, and my wife and I are squeezing by these days on little more than $200 monthly. I don't seem half so bright as my teenage grandchildren. And the other night I tried to read the U.N. charter and couldn't make head nor tail of it. Is there any reason to think I won't become increasingly inadequate?"

Answer: — Stop trying to compete with teenagers or with the eggheads who concocted the U.N. charter, and start taking a more positive attitude. Focus your energies on things you find enjoyable and can do well, whether it be hanging wallpaper or keeping the backyard hemlocks trimmed. Remind yourself that though your income is scrimped it's more than some people have and is sufficient to keep the wolf from the door. Vow to develop an absorbing avocation during 1972, such as organizing a club for other down-in-the-mouth retirees, starting an employment agency for older people, or learning a profitable hobby such as woodworking or bookbinding.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Tuesday

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hold off on travel. Develop ideas. Avoid premature decisions, actions. Neighbor may make some unusual demands; this also applies to relatives. Be patient. Seek new avenues of expression. Stress self-reliance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Money is very much in picture; debts are paid and collected. Review financial procedures. Check assets; take inventory. Delay decision connected with large outlay of funds. Time is on your side.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What appears adverse could rebound in your favor. Delay signing of contracts, other agreements. Be certain of facts. Don't heed one who merely whispers sweet nothings. That's what you could get — nothing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): One who shares your interests may be leaning too heavily. Means do your share, but don't carry extra burden. Message should become increasingly clear. Be aware of time printed on envelopes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends fall out. Means some of your ideas, notions and desires may be subject to revision. Those you rely upon act in strange manner. Accept necessity for changes. Don't hold on to past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Diplomatic approach aids in achieving goal. This is no time to force issues. What you need will be offered. Give family member benefit of doubt. One in position of authority is not certain.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): People who do lots of talking now could be seeking to cover lack of knowledge. Know this and don't believe everything you hear. Be perceptive. Ask questions which enable you to perfect techniques.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stick to conservative course. Consolidate gains. Don't be tempted into giving up something for nothing. Avoid the sensational. Older individual can aid. Heed voice of experience. Money situation improves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Partnership proposals require special care, consideration. Don't go by surface appearances. Look for potential hidden clauses. One who comes to you for advice is merely probing, testing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look for new avenues of expression. You can break through red tape. Temporary restriction, confinement may be on agenda. Creative resources surge to forefront. What appears a setback may be an asset.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hunch could bring desired results. Key is to be confident. Emotions tend now to dominate. Give logic equal time. Lovers' quarrel should not be blown out of proportion. Strive for balance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Study details; be thorough. Family situation will change — in your favor. What appeared serious might actually be cause for hilarity. Don't take others — or yourself — too seriously. Play waiting game.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, a spiritual person and a natural humanitarian. Your experiences this year will range far and wide, with August indicated as a most significant month. You tend to be a perfectionist. But you never ask anyone to do what you would not attempt.

Liquor License Denied In Brief Session

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

In one of the briefest sessions on record — under 15 minutes — the City Council Monday denied the application of Richard Moulton for a Class C liquor license at 1134 N St.

Attorney David Tews, the only person appearing at the hearing, told the Council that the Lancaster County Beverage Association opposed granting the license.

He pointed out that under the Council's set "numbers policy" only 133 liquor licenses are allowed in the city and currently that quota is filled. In other action the Council:

Resolutions and Public Hearings

—Ordered construction of Water District 845, located in 14th St. from Old Cheney Rd. south 500 feet.

—Ordered construction along north side of Baldwin Ave. from 6th to 59th Sts. and along the south side of Baldwin Ave. from 150 feet west of 63rd St. east to Colner Blvd.

—Approved assessment resolutions for the following special assessments in districts: Paying Districts 1925, 2063, 2110, 2117, 2122, 2127, 2137 and 2138; Water Districts 771, 810, 811, 813, 817 and 821; Sewer Districts 846, 869, 872, 875, 878, and 879; Ornamental Lighting Districts 121, 122, 125 and 127.

—Approved Sewer District 898, for an eight-inch sanitary sewer in West 9 St. from N.W. 20th St. to N.W. 24th St.

—Indefinitely postponed a graveling District 235, for Newton from 57th to 58th St.

—Approved amendments to Ornamental Lighting District 121, amending Sec. 1 of Ord. 9556 to include additional benefited real estate, located in the vicinity of 70th St. and Leighton to Huntington Ave. to Walker to 74th St. for Rosemont 5th Addition.

—Approved amendments to Ornamental Lighting District 127, amending Sec. 1 of Ord. 9786 to include additional benefited real estate from South 70th to 77th Sts.; Old Post Rd. from 70th to 74th St.; Old Post Rd. from 70th to 74th St. south 345 feet south; Devonshire from South to a point 630 feet north.

—Approved application of Schweitzer Excavating Co. for change of zone from A-2 Single Family to K Light Industry, located on the west side of 8th St. south of Hill.

—Approved application of Irma Barry for a change of zone from A-2 Single Family to G Local Business, located on the north side of W St. and generally on the east side of 46th St.

Ordinances, First Reading

—Creating a paving district in all the internal streets in Trendwood 5th Addition.

—Creating a sewer district in the east-west alley between Burlington Ave. and Platte Ave. from 73rd St. east to the east-line of Blk. 57, First Addition to Norwood Park.

—Creating a sewer district in all of Trendwood 5th Addition.

—Creating a water district in all the internal streets in Trendwood 5th Addition.

—Creating a water district in North 1st St. from a point located approximately 1,179 feet south of Adams to Superior and a 12-inch water main in Fairfield from No. 1st St. to 3rd St.

—Creating an ornamental lighting district in all the internal streets in Trendwood 5th Addition.

—Accepting and approving the plat of Briarhurst 2nd Addition, located in vicinity of 45th St. and Old Cheney Rd.

—Accepting and approving the plat of Sandalwood Dr.

—Vacating Gillan Rd. between east-line of 57th St. and west-line of 58th St.

—Vacating all that portion of Drury Lane, located east of 70th St. and north of Van Dorn.

—Renaming Wilberbe between 46th and 47th Sts. to M St.

Board Okays Cause Of House Blaze Dismissal Of Policeman

The Personnel Board Monday upheld the decision of Lincoln Police Chief Joseph Carroll to fire former Police Sgt. Rollie Woodruff from the police department.

In a letter to Woodruff released by the board, chairman Dennis Fetting said that the board "unanimously affirmed" the firing by Chief Carroll.

Woodruff, 45, a ten-year veteran of the department, was discharged following a department investigation of an Aug. 20 incident in which he "struck" another officer. Woodruff appealed his firing to the Personnel Board which held a public hearing Jan. 13th.

At the hearing Woodruff admitted the incident and said he had no hopes of returning to the department. However, he said he wanted to point out certain complaints he had about police personnel matters.

A piece of incense left burning on a wood log was the apparent cause of a Sunday night fire which severely damaged the Donald Reeves residence at 4843 Calvert and seriously injured one fireman, Fire Inspector Dale Boettcher said Monday.

Seven units answered the fire alarm and brought the blaze under control in about 30 minutes.

Lt. Dale Helvey sustained fractured vertebrae when an explosion inside the house blew a wall down on him. He was reported in "fair" condition Monday at Bryan Memorial Hospital.

Two other firemen were slightly injured, but were not hospitalized.

The explosion which knocked down the wall was caused by a backdraft, which occurred when firemen attempted to enter the house according to Boettcher. The sudden rush of air into a burning building sometimes produces an explosive condition, he said.

Boettcher said it was questionable whether the house could be repaired.

In addition to extensive smoke and heat damage, the inspector said the west wall had been blown down, the east wall had been forced out four to six inches and the roof had been raised about an inch.

School-City Library Combination To Be Explored

The City Council Monday directed the Library Board to explore the possibility of combining school and city library facilities.

In a morning meeting with Library Director Charles Dalrymple the Council expressed interest in such joint facilities.

Councilman Bob Sikyta said it seemed to him that it would be better, both from a financial and a use standpoint, for the city to use existing libraries in the public schools instead of continually building new branch libraries.

Dalrymple replied that he is opposed to this concept.

"It is a matter of square footage — there has to be a separate kind of facility since different types of books are needed for an adult library," he said.

Dalrymple added that the economy of space is not as much as the Council might think. In addition, he said, "We get more community participation in a non-school library."

Sikyta replied that at the public schools the city has "the utilities, land, better police protection, plus the fact that people are used to going there."

Dalrymple said he did not think there was any desire of the people to have such joint facilities. He cited a study conducted several years ago which indicated this.

However, Council member Helen Boosalis stated that she thought the public now is interested in such a joint project. She said she has been trying to combine the libraries systems for "13 years now."

Councilman Merle Hale added, "If a school library has a separate wing, adults will use it."

In other business Personnel Director Walter Mitchell told the Council that the President's Pay Board has cleared all raises for city employees.

The wage increases for the city's 1,400 employees averages 3% across-the-board and went into effect when the wage-price freeze was lifted Nov. 13th. Mitchell said that special permission from the Pay Board will be needed for wage hikes higher than 5.5%.

In other business the Council decided to look into the possibility of having the city do purchasing and personnel work for Lancaster County.

Mitchell said that some county officials at one time had expressed an interest in this.

Boettcher said one of Reeves' stepsons had placed the burning incense on a log that was standing on end near the fireplace woodbox which contained paper and kindling.

He estimated that the woodbox caught fire about 45 minutes after the Reeves' stepsons left the house.

To Register Prostitutes

Belo Horizonte, Brazil (AP) — Police investigator Francisco Grossi plans to register the city's estimated 10,000 prostitutes to have authorities a clearer picture of the profession's problems. He says the prostitutes, whom he prefers to call "butterflies," will be able to enroll in government health and literacy programs.

In other business Personnel Director Walter Mitchell told the Council that the President's Pay Board has cleared all raises for city employees.

The wage increases for the city's 1,400 employees averages 5% across-the-board and went into effect when the wage-price freeze was lifted Nov. 13th. Mitchell said that special permission from the Pay Board will be needed for wage hikes higher than 5.5%.

In other business the Council decided to look into the possibility of having the city do purchasing and personnel work for Lancaster County.

Mitchell said that some county officials at one time had expressed an interest in this.

Exon Requests Restoration Of Quarterly Road Funding

Gov. J. J. Exon Monday asked U.S. Transportation Secretary John Volpe to restore a fourth-quarter cutback in promised federal highway funds to Nebraska.

In a letter to Volpe, Exon said the "erratic" release of federal obligation funds to the state during the last quarter of fiscal 1972 "is resulting in a major curtailment of our fiscal year 1972 construction letting program."

Exon requested a restoration of the original fourth quarter expected allocation of $8 million.

The governor also asked restoration of funds that were delayed because of sudden major rules changes in the second and third quarters, to bring the requested allocation to $23.6 million for the fourth quarter.

In the letter, Exon told the transportation secretary the sudden rules changes governing release of federal funds "increased imbalances of un released apportionments between the states which has existed since 1968."

"The second quarter change in rules caught Nebraska at a particularly vulnerable time and will result in our dropping further below the national average in the maximum amount of our apportionment that can be obligated during fiscal year 1972."

The letter also said although the states are "periodically reminded by 'Washington' as to the need for better management of state programs," the most serious deterrent to such planning was lack of predictability of the amount of federal funds to be available.

"There is an urgent need to correct this serious management deficiency as soon as possible," the letter said.

The governor also sent a letter to U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Nebr., urging him to "use your good offices to assist our state in our effort to have reversed arbitrary and unfair decisions by the federal bureaucracy."

Exon was the author of a resolution which was unanimously adopted by the executive committee of the National Governors' Conference over the weekend concerning the highway fund crisis.

The resolution opposed reductions in states' normal obligation authority as a result of "arbitrary and precipitous programming actions" by the federal highway administration.

1920s Singer G. Austin Dies

Palm Springs, Calif. (AP) — Gene Austin, silvery-voiced crooner of the 1920s who made "My Blue Heaven" a worldwide hit, died Monday at Desert Hospital. He was 71.

Austin also wrote the words to a number of standards — among them, "Lonesome Road," "When My Baby Walks Down the Street," "How Come You Do Me Like You Do?" and "Wedding Bells Are Breaking Up That Old Gang of Mine."

Officials Ask Dismissal Of Hair Lawsuit

Officials of O'Neill High School have asked dismissal of a federal district court lawsuit seeking $35,000 in damages by a sophomore at the school who was not allowed to attend classes because of his hair length.

Michael Thomas earlier this month won a temporary restraining order allowing him to return to classes. He was defended by the Nebraska Civil Liberties Union.

In answering the complaint, officials of the O'Neill school said Thomas was made to sit in an area of the school normally called the "balcony" which constitutes a study hall and said instruction was available to the youth at all times.

School officials said their dress codes provide only that hair be well-groomed and neat and contended the code "allows a sufficient leeway for development of students' personality without allowing the children to be a disruptive influence."

'Professional Accountability' Said Drawing To A Close

The director of the Center for the Study of Social Intervention at Yeshiva University in New York City said Monday that the day when most professionals were accountable only to themselves appears to be drawing to a close.

Prof. Robert Reiff who teaches at the Albert-Einstein College of Medicine Yeshiva, said that demands for professional accountability to non-professional groups is having a "profound" effect on the role of the professional in American life.

Reiff was in Lincoln to address a colloquium at the University of Nebraska psychology department.

In an interview, Reiff said what he termed an "old humanistic" notion of professional duties "to take care of the poor and the disadvantaged doesn't exist anymore."

Although the number of professionals increased considerably following World War II, Reiff said, that change was accompanied by an increase in the affluence of the middle class.

And those "middle Americans" are now affluent enough "to buy up all the services and leave nothing to the poor," he said.

The poor, he said, are beginning to realize the only way they "can get services is through publicly supported programs."

And he said they are demanding, especially in urban ghettos, a voice in the professional decision-making process on boards of community social service agencies.

Thus, he said, non-professional ghetto residents are becoming the agents of change in professional life, and they are demanding that professionals be accountable to the community.

Officials Ask Dismissal Of Hair Lawsuit

Officials of O'Neill High School have asked dismissal of a federal district court lawsuit seeking $35,000 in damages by a sophomore at the school who was not allowed to attend classes because of his hair length.

Michael Thomas earlier this month won a temporary restraining order allowing him to return to classes. He was defended by the Nebraska Civil Liberties Union.

In answering the complaint, officials of the O'Neill school said Thomas was made to sit in an area of the school normally called the "balcony" which constitutes a study hall and said instruction was available to the youth at all times.

School officials said their dress codes provide only that hair be well-groomed and neat and contended the code "allows a sufficient leeway for development of students' personality without allowing the children to be a disruptive influence."

'Professional Accountability' Said Drawing To A Close

The director of the Center for the Study of Social Intervention at Yeshiva University in New York City said here Monday that the day when most professionals were accountable only to themselves appears to be drawing to a close.

Prof. Robert Reiff who teaches at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine Yeshiva, said that demands for professional accountability to non-professional groups is having a "profound" effect on the role of the professional in American life.

Reiff was in Lincoln to address a colloquium at the University of Nebraska psychology department.

In an interview, Reiff said what he termed an "old humanistic" notion of professional duties "to take care of the poor and the disadvantaged doesn't exist anymore."

Although the number of professionals increased considerably following World War II, Reiff said, that change was accompanied by an increase in the affluence of the middle class.

And those "middle Americans" are now affluent enough "to buy up all the services and leave nothing to the poor," he said.

The poor, he said, are beginning to realize the only way they "can get services is through publicly supported programs."

And he said they are demanding, especially in urban ghettos, a voice in the professional decision-making process on boards of community social service agencies.

Thus, he said, non-professional ghetto residents are becoming the agents of change in professional life, and they are demanding that professionals be accountable to the community.

'Paintin' Place' Artists Gaining Fame

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Arthur — The local Baptist minister's wife insists she wasn't the gal who named "Paintin' Place."

But it was indeed Mrs. Nell Greer who started classes here nearly four years ago resulting in an art gallery as quaint as its name. Tiny and barn-red, it's about as prominent as building is likely to get in a town of 175.

Besides that, it occupies an olden day bank which once served cowpokes for 50 miles around. Camouflaging its inside vault was the latest project of the 15 "Sand Hills Sketchers" who meet over Mrs. Greer's easel every Monday.

Although all but three are "ordinary ranch wives," they and their work rate high praise from their instructor of 25 years' experience.

"I've taught classes in Canada, Colorado and California, but will have to say that I've never come across such talent," said Mrs. Greer.

An example and "one of our most able" is Mrs. Jack Kramer, who is averaging a sale per month despite her recent start in the hobby. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Norman Kramer, is currently the club's president.

Depicting mostly the outdoor west which they see all around, the ladies have sold nearly $1,500 in paintings over the past year. Many are in the $50 range, some as high as $150.

"You'd be surprised how many people find us here and stop, especially in the tourist season," said Mrs. Greer, who spearheaded daily openings last summer.

How she and her husband, the Rev. Arthur Greer, found their way to the remote community is a story in itself. Especially since they were used to serving city churches of up to 700 members.

Most recently at Anaheim, Calif. ("The church was right between Disneyland and Knott's Berry Farm."), they decided the coastal pace was too fast. So they requested a church in "the most rural place that could be found."

"We knew that was Arthur when the congregation contacted us and we had to search several maps to find the place," said the artist. "We've been here 4½ years now and wouldn't go back to California for anything."

Both the Greers were foreign born, he in Ireland and she in Canada. Besides a long pastoral service in this country, they once worked as missionaries to a settlement of Ukrainians and Dukabores in northern Saskatchewan.

Although the painters' husbands admit to a secret pride in their wives, the men have been known to heckle.

"Some of the ranchers even counted the windmill blades in one painting and said we were short," recalled Mrs. Greer.

"Naturally, they're our worst critics."

Public Hearing Set On WIR Program

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

A four-member committee established by the University of Nebraska Board of Regents to review controversial student fee-financed programs on the Lincoln campuses has set a public hearing for Wednesday night to hear campus and public views on the proposed World in Revolution conference.

The hearing will begin at 7 p.m. in the student union on the City Campus, according to a statement issued Monday night after the first meeting of the "interim program arbitration board."

The statement was signed by Law Prof. James Lake, president of the faculty senate; student Kerry Winterer, president of the Nebraska Union board; Ely Meyerson, interim dean of student affairs, and Steve Fowler, president of ASUN (the student government organization).

Criticism Registered

The arbitration board was formed by the regents Jan. 3 after a month-long freeze on some student fee expenditures. The freeze was prompted by regental and public criticism of several events in the fall which involved student fee funds.

At the January meeting, the regents lifted the freeze they had imposed a month earlier, and said all disputed programs should be referred to the arbitration panel.

The issue was handed to the arbitrators Monday by UNI Interim Chancellor C. Peter Magrath, and the procedures to follow in the matter were decided at a late-afternoon meeting.

LAP Committee Urges Release Of Probe Report

The Equal Opportunity Committee of the Lincoln Action Program Monday night urged the mayor and the City Council to release the Human Rights Commission report on charges of police brutality as soon as possible.

The report, prepared as an outgrowth of charges by Cleveland Randolph that he was beaten by police officers following his arrest on two traffic charges, is presently being held by Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf pending final outcome of Randolph's trial on the traffic charges.

Man Is Injured In Collision Of Truck, Train

A Lincoln man was taken to St. Elizabeth Health Center late Monday night following a pickup-train accident near 56th and Wilshire, police reported.

Police said Douglas Chapin, 22, of 1936 South, suffered injuries to his left hip when the truck he was driving was struck on the driver's side by a westbound train.

The force of the impact threw the pickup over 100 feet from the crossing, police said.

Preliminary Hearings Scheduled For Cooper On 2 Drug Charges

Preliminary hearings were set Feb. 10 in Lancaster County Court on two felony drug charges filed Monday against Louis Patrick Cooper, human rights coordinator for the Lincoln Action Program (LAP).

Cooper, 24, of 321 So. 18th, who was arrested at his home Friday night, was charged with delivering a controlled substance, LSD, Jan. 18, and with being in possession of marijuana with intent to deliver Jan. 21.

Judge Ralph Soucm set bonds for Cooper at $1,000 on each felony offense.

Two other persons also arrested at Cooper's home Friday night were charged with misdemeanor offenses of being in a place where a controlled substance was being used. Trials for the pair were set Feb. 23.

According to Police Inspector Robert Sawdon, six narcotics officers of the Lincoln Police Department and two officers of the Nebraska State Patrol participated in the raid at the Cooper home after a month-long investigation.

Nebraska Projects Included In Budget

Washington (UPI) — President Nixon has asked Congress in his fiscal 1973 budget for $10.31 million in Corps of Engineer projects in Nebraska, almost all of it for the Gavins Point Dam and flood control on Papillion Creek.

Of the total, $3 million was allocated for construction of multipurpose projects, including power installations at the Gavins Point Dam on Lewis and Clark Lake and relocation of the town of Niobrara. The funds would be shared with South Dakota. Another $2.37 million was asked for operation and maintenance of Gavins Point.

Space Tax Hit At Hotel-Motel Assn. Meeting

Omaha — The Nebraska Hotel-Motel Assn. convention has reaffirmed that the association is opposed to a space tax in any amount, President Irv Chesen reported.

Irv Chesen

The association, representing some 4,800 rooms, feels that although it is for tourism, money for promoting it should come as an appropriation measure from the state's general fund, Chesen said.

Chesen, of the Villager in Lincoln, was elected president of the association; Paul Gaeta, Omaha Hilton, vice president; Jo Ann Lowery, secretary, and Bill Davies, Prom Town House, treasurer.

At the association's annual banquet, Jerry Dann, Conant Hotel, was awarded the Dan Powers Hotel-Motel man of the Year Award.

The award is presented to a member who has done an outstanding job for the good of the industry in the past year.

control project on Papillion Creek and its tributaries.

The recommendations were included in a $1.8 billion budget for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which compares with $1.59 billion actually appropriated in fiscal 1972.

Requested for Nebraska and neighboring states by category was: general investigations, $479,000; construction, $7 million; operation and maintenance, $2.83 million.

General investigations for flood control projects included: Harlan County Lake review, Republican River, $23,000; metropolitan Omaha, Council Bluffs, Iowa, $150,000; Nemaha-Little Nemaha rivers, $36,000; North Platte River (with Colorado and Wyoming), $20,000; Salt Creek and tributaries, $60,000, and Wood River, Prairie Creek, $20,000.

Also sought was $170,000 for broad consideration of water and related land resource needs for the Platte River Basin.

Operation and maintenance funds requested in addition to the Gavins Point Dam project were Harlan County Lake, $310,000, and Salt Creek and tributaries, $150,000, both for flood control projects.

Omaha Student Dies After Truck Crash

By Associated Press
An Omaha North High student, 15, who was a passenger in a pickup truck died early Monday at Immanuel Hospital in Omaha after the truck collided with another pickup parked on the shoulder of Highway 73, one mile south of the Douglas-Washington County line.

Douglas County authorities identified the victim as Brad Janisch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Janisch of Omaha. The accident took place late Sunday night and the young Janisch died five hours later.

Funding Available For Fair Site Use

The Nebraska Association of Fair Managers was urged Monday to encourage year-round use of county fairgrounds through the development of park and recreational facilities.

Robert Dula, University of Nebraska extension service supervisor for parks and recreation, told the association's 63rd annual meeting in Lincoln that federal funding is available for qualified projects.

Dula cited camping grounds, swimming facilities, baseball diamonds, picnic areas and playgrounds as examples of what has and can be located on fairgrounds.

"Counties can participate in the development of park and recreational areas," he said in encouraging fair boards to seek the necessary machinery through county government.

"Once fairgrounds were only used during fair week," Dula said, "but now they have the potential for year-round use for all kinds of recreational activities."

Year-round park and recreational facilities can be located on fairgrounds through cooperative agreements with county and community park and recreation boards.

Dula said 50% federal and 25% state funding is available for qualified projects with the remainder coming from local financing.

"Some fair boards have encouraged joint-use projects on fairgrounds," Dula said, "but too many are missing the opportunity to be greater service to their areas."

Nearly 200 county fair managers and directors were registered for the two-day annual convention which winds up Tuesday with the election of officers.

State Fair May Expand To Include 2 Weekends

A mood of optimism and expansion prevailed at the annual meeting of the Nebraska State Board of Agriculture at the Radisson Cornhusker Monday.

The board, made up of representatives of the county fair boards in Nebraska, is the official operator of the Nebraska State Fair.

Officials of the Nebraska State Fair are seriously considering the possibility of extending the length of the fair to 9 or 10 days including two weekends, according to Don Thompson, president of the State Board of Agriculture.

Thompson cited requests for split shows by the dairy exhibitors and interest in split shows by other livestock groups as one reason for the proposal.

Very Crowded
"We are getting very crowded in the livestock areas. It is becoming increasingly expensive to show livestock. By splitting the shows we could get more participation than we do now and we could accommodate more exhibitors," Thompson said.

Henry Brandt, fair manager, pointed out that it would be difficult to split the show. "The mid point of the fair is the weekend and you cannot move cattle in and out in the heavy crowds," he said.

Brandt also believes that income would rise with a longer fair. "We cannot handle the crowds on the single weekend. We don't have enough eating establishments and rides to handle them. If we had two weekends we might get slightly smaller crowds but we could

East Lincoln Bypass Is Called Unnecessary

The proposed East Lincoln bypass for the state freeway system is unnecessary, a member of the Bluestem Group of the Sierra Club said at a meeting of the group Monday night.

Prof. J. A. Fagerstrom of the University of Nebraska Department of Geology said that plans for the bypass called for interchanges at just about every mile road.

"These things tend to spawn shopping centers, office buildings and so forth," he said. "It promotes the decay of the downtown area by moving everybody out of the premises."

Proposed corridors for bypass routes east and west around Lincoln were made public earlier this month by the State Roads Dept.

The proposed routes were the result of a two-year study by a private consulting firm and suggests alternatives for each of the bypasses.

In an interview after the meeting Fagerstrom said that if the east bypass is built the group favors the proposed alternate that would cut through Wilderness Park.

The consulting firm that outlined broad corridors for the bypass routes also suggested a route for the east bypass that would avoid Wilderness Park by swinging to southward before connecting with a proposed segment of the freeway that would run south from Lincoln.

Fagerstrom noted that County Commissioner William Grossman has spoken of plans to expand Wilderness Park southward at some future date.

Fagerstrom said the route that would cut through Wilderness Park would cut through grassland, while the southern alternate would destroy woodland.

"Even though this area is now out of the park, we feel it may someday be part of the park," he said.

Upper Missouri Region Planning Agency Created

Washington (UPI) — The Nixon administration Monday created a five-state "Upper Missouri River Regional Commission" to stimulate the area's lagging economy.

The commission includes the states of Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wyoming.

The Commerce Department, which will administer the commission, described it as a federal-state partnership that would help channel federal money into the area. In addition, the commission will develop a plan "to overcome problems of lagging economies in this multi-state region," department said.

About $300,000 will be set aside initially to operate the commission.

MISS VIRGINIA FERRARA
This morning Mr. and Mrs. V. Frank Ferrara of Wahoo, make announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Virginia Gayle to John G. Young, son of Mrs. Jack G. Young of Portland, Ore., and the late Mr. Young.
Saturday, Feb. 19, has been chosen as the wedding date.
Miss Ferrara is a graduate of the University of Nebraska where she is a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. She now is caring as a buyer in one of the Portland shops.
Mr. Young is a graduate of Portland State University.

MISS BARBARA SCHOENLEBER
Announcement is made this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Schoenleber of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Barbara, to Donald L. Reimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orin C. Reimer of Concordia, Kan., formerly of Lincoln.
The wedding is planned for Saturday, May 27.
Miss Schoenleber is a former student in Hastings College and now is caring as a secretary in the Nebraska State Probation offices.
Mr. Reimer is a junior at Hastings College where he is majoring in vocal music education, and where he is a member of Eta Phi Lambda fraternity.

MISS COLLEEN EHMAN
Of interest to campus circles is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Ehman of Chicago, Ill., formerly of Lincoln, of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Colleen, to Joseph G. Cihal, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cihal of Dwight.
Saturday, March 25, is named as the date of the wedding.
Miss Ehman is a senior at the University of Nebraska where she is majoring in elementary education.
Mr. Cihal is engaged in farming near Dwight.

Luncheon Planned

The Craft Class and Art Department of the Lincoln Woman's Club will have a project luncheon at the Clubhouse on Friday, Jan. 21.
The proceeds from the 12 o'clock event will be used for philanthropic purposes — and the members hope to purchase a piece of equipment for a local hospital. The Lincoln Woman's Club last year donated a vital machine to St. Elizabeth Community Health Center.
Reservations must be made by 12 o'clock noon Wednesday, Jan. 26. Mrs. Myrtle Harpham is in charge of reservations at 435-6048.

Extension Meeting

One of the most used kitchen utensils was the topic of the recent meeting of the Odds and Ends Extension Club.
"Knives" was the group's subject, and the discussion was lead by Mrs. R. M. Sandstedt.
Hostess for the event was Mrs. Elton Lux, who was assisted by Mrs. Leola Bowers.
One highlight of the program was a quiz on "How Sharp Are You?"—testing the members' knowledge of the quality of knives and how to use and protect them. Gertrude Skinner's poem, "Grandma's Apron," was read by Mrs. Sandstedt.
Hostess for the next Odds and Ends meeting on Thursday, Feb. 17, will be Mrs. V. H. Petersen.

Artists' Display

Attendants Named

On Monday an art show, which includes the works of three Lincoln artists, opened at the First Federal Building and Loan auditorium in downtown Lincoln.
All members of the Lincoln Artists Guild, the three artists include Mrs. Shirley Martin, president of the Guild and a teacher of art at Southeast High school; Mrs. Waunita Ray, and Mrs. James Ray who is an instructor in art at the Regional Center.
The 52 pieces include oil paintings, watercolor, oil acrylic, pen and ink drawings, wood carvings, and other work in the art media.
The show will continue through Monday, Feb. 14.

PEO Group Will Meet
The members of PEO, Chapter FB, will be treated to a group birthday party when they gather at the home of Mrs. Walter Stephenson, No. 6 Suffix Place, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 25.
Assisting hostesses for the 8 o'clock party will be the chapter officers.

Judging from what we hear there will be few vacancies as far as processional aides are concerned during the spring and summer.
As we have said before, there was a time when June was the popular month for weddings. June, of course, actually has lost none of its glamour — it's just that there are so many runners-up among the other months of the year.
April is a particularly busy month for weddings this year, and not too far behind is March.
And speaking of March — one of its brides is Miss Arlene Busboom who has chosen Saturday, March 18, for her marriage to Gerald T. Giraud. The ceremony will be solemnized at 7 o'clock in the evening at the Trinity Methodist Church.
This morning Miss Busboom makes announcement of the members of the bridal entourage. For her maid of honor the bride-elect has chosen Miss Judy Lostro, and her bridesmaids will be Miss Nancy Bettin of Jansen; Miss Mary Larsen and Miss Elisa Clarke. Miss Wanda Van Andel of Denton has been named as the junior bridesmaid, and Tracy Lawton of Pleasant Dale will be the flower girl.
Randy Beezley will serve Mr. Giraud as best man, and seating the guests will be Gary Busboom, William Buntane, David Giraud, brother of the bridegroom-elect, and David Douglas. Stanley Giraud, also a brother of the bridegroom will light the candles.
The wedding music will be played by Paul Newton, guitarist.

Wedgewood Manor Lincoln Heights Southwood Summit South Hills

Moving into a new city or even a new neighborhood can be a frightening experience — But then again, it can be quite satisfying when your new neighbors go all out to make you feel welcome and at home in your new residence.
One of the most recent arrivals to Lincoln and the Wedgewood Manor area are the members of the James Burch family.
Mr. and Mrs. Burch and their two daughters, 13-year-old Kelly and seven-year-old Susan, made their move to Lincoln shortly before Christmas. They are former residents of Wichita, Kan., and Mr. Burch is now employed with the Parke-Davis Co.
Well, getting back to the 'make yourself at home in the new neighborhood' get-togethers, we learned that Mrs. Burch was the guest of honor at a luncheon out on the town recently. Of course, all welcoming activities for the distaff side of the families had to wait until the youngsters were well settled in their class rooms.
The luncheon took place at Miller's Tea Room on Tuesday, Jan. 18, and making up the group were Mrs. Burch, of course, and her new neighbors, Mrs. Walter L. Walke, Mrs. Wesley Tomhave, and Mrs. Nolan Bode.
But before the luncheon, Mrs. Burch was welcomed into the home of Mrs. R. D. Hartley, where she was a guest for a morning coffee.
And then the entire Burch family was treated to lunch on their moving day when Mrs. Lester Donlan entertained them at her home.
The Rev. and Mrs. James Hansen recently returned to their Lincoln Heights home from a 10-day tour of the Holy Land.
Accompanying the suburban residents on the tour, along with some 50 others from all over the United States, were John Scott and the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Birdwell, all of Lincoln Heights.
During their vacation, the Rev. and Mrs. Hansen made a stop in New York City, where they saw the Broadway production of "Fiddler on the Roof."
The tour took the travelers to Israel, Jerusalem and the Sea of Galilee. Jerusalem had to be one of the favorite spots, since it has hardly been modernized, and camels, sheep, and donkeys wander through the streets. Everything is similar to what it is thought to be during Bible times.
And then the group stopped off in Athens

for a few days — then it was back to New York and on to Lincoln.
The home of Mr. and Mrs. Vladislav Sobotka in Southbrook Summit has been bristling with activity recently due to the fact that the family has welcomed some very special guests. Mr. Sobotka's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sobotka of Redwood City, Calif., and their son, Craig, spent a week in Lincoln recently.
Other guests greeted by the Sobotka family were Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Norris of Casper, Wyo.
Two of the Sobotka children, Miss Janet Sobotka and Richard Sobotka both celebrated their birthdays in January, just three days apart. Miss Sobotka's birthday is Jan. 6, and her brother's birthday is Jan. 9. In honor of the occasion, Mr. and Mrs. Sobotka entertained at a buffet supper.

Outlandish costumes and unusual skills have become a traditional part of the annual 'passing out party' of the Wooden Spoon. The organization of 50 women who gather once a month — during the winter months, that is — for dinner and a program held its 'passing out party' on Tuesday evening, Jan. 18. The celebration for the strictly social club is symbolic of the old board passing the reins to a new group of officers and board members who have no previous knowledge that they are to be so honored. Pictured above, seated, are the new Wooden Spoon officials. From left to right, they are Miss Elsie Fitzgerald; Miss Bess A. Richards, secretary; Mrs. Cloud Smith, Mrs. Edward H. Heitman; Miss Dorcas Weatherby, president; and Mrs. Jim E. Alexander. Not pictured is new board member Mrs. Jean Furr. Standing, from left, are the outgoing board members, including Mrs. Lillian Polley, Mrs. Dorothy C. Olson, Miss Elva McFie, Mrs. R. V. Shumate, Mrs. Robert Keller, and Miss Doris O'Donnell.

Party Honors Miss Glenda Hall

If you have looked at your thermometer you'd never guess that actually spring will be here before you know it — But of course between now and the day that the moon and the tides decide that spring has arrived, there is considerable activity.

Evening Wedding

The marriage of Miss Cheryl Renee Simonsen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Simonsen of Pender, to Craig E. Malmberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Ardell Malmberg, also of Pender, was solemnized at a ceremony which took place on Saturday evening, Dec. 11, at St. John's Lutheran Church near Pender. The Rev. H. L. Hennig read the lines of the service.

Miss Kathy Simonsen attended her sister as maid of honor; and the bridesmaids included Mrs. Janelle Simonsen and Mrs. Claudia Simonsen both of Pender. Miss Cherri Malmberg of Pender, sister of the bridegroom, was junior bridesmaid.

Clay Malmberg, Danny Simonsen, Randy Simonsen and Corey Malmberg, all of Pender, served as groomsmen; and the corps of ushers included Curtis Malmberg, Jim Novak and Mike Muessel.

For her wedding, the bride chose a gown of white velvet styled in the Empire mode. The bodice featured a portrait neckline and long, tapered sleeves. A camelot cap held in place her tiered veil of silk illusion; and she carried a cascade of pink roses and stephanotis.

The couple is making their home in Lincoln where Mr. Malmberg is a student at the University of Nebraska. The bride is careering at the State Capitol.

Among those activities are weddings — the weeks ahead are filled with them.

One of the early February weddings will be that of Miss Glenda Hall and Larry Malick which is to take place on Saturday, Feb. 5. And since the wedding is only matter of days away it goes without saying that Miss Hall has been busy with parties.

A recent courtesy for the soon-to-be bride was the informal party and shower for which Mrs. Arthur Suttin and Mrs. James Sinamark were hostesses last Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Sinamark.

Unicameral Ladies Club

The members of the Unicameral Ladies Club gathered at the Nebraska Club on Monday afternoon, Jan. 24, for a 12:30 o'clock meeting.

Hostesses for the event were Mrs. William Swanson, Mrs. Orvan Keyes of Springfield, Mrs. Sam Klaver of Omaha, and Mrs. William Hasebrook of West Point.

Don't feel overweight, ...puffed-up, bloated

—when body-water retention "swells" your waist, thighs, legs, arms.

It's natural that you, too, may have a tendency to retain water in your system—body bloating fluid that builds up during the strenuous days of your pre-menstrual or menstrual period, or stress and overtiredness. That's why it makes such good sense to try X-PILL, the amazing new "Water Pills." They are a gentle diuretic that helps you lose water-weight gain, and relieve body-bloating puffiness, tummy bloat, arms and legs enlargement, and water retentive "swelling" due to water-weight gain. Guaranteed or money back. Ask your druggist for X-PILL. "Water Pills" today because it must work for you, or you don't lose a penny.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Some hands require hairtrigger defense for the contract to be defeated. Consider this deal where East-West must cooperate perfectly to achieve their full potential.

West leads the king of diamonds and East — who knows that his partner has led the king from the A-K — should signal for a continuation by playing the queen on it. This enables West to lead the ten of diamonds at trick two, which East overtakes with the jack in order to return a trump and prevent South from ruffing any clubs in dummy.

Declarer wins the trump with the ace and leads a low club towards the queen, hoping to find West with the king and thus avoid a second club loser.

But East wins the queen with the king and leads another trump, and it does not matter from here on in how declarer plays the hand. Eventually he loses a heart, two diamonds and two clubs to go down one.

Now let's go back to trick one and have East signal less dramatically for a diamond continuation by playing the nine instead of the queen. In that case, West might well continue with the ace in the hope of finding partner with either the singleton nine or the doubleton 9-6.

If West did that, South would make the contract, for he could not then be stapped from ruffing a club in dummy to produce his ninth trick.

The play of the queen of diamonds on the king guarantees that the queen is either a singleton or is accompanied by the jack. It is this universally accepted method of play that enables West to confidently lead the ten of diamonds at trick two and start declarer down the road to defeat.

Abby

don't tell your son

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 33 years. My husband is 62 and I am 58.

Recently my husband lost his job because he had an affair with a young married woman who worked where he worked.

My question: Should I write and tell our son the truth about his father? Our son lives in another state but will be coming home soon, and I'm afraid somebody might tell him. This is a small town and you know how people talk, and I'd rather have him hear it from me than from a stranger.

Also, the young woman my husband had the affair with is still working there. Her husband is employed and I am not, and I am too old to start looking for a job. Do you think that's fair?

UNHAPPY AT 58
 DEAR UNHAPPY: No. If your husband was fired because of the affair, the woman should have been fired also. Don't tell your son the reason for his father's dismissal. He may not hear about it. But if he does, tell him the truth.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion on a statement my boyfriend has made to me. Let me preface by saying that our relationship is very serious, and we are considering marriage.

We were discussing children, and I asked him if he would ever change a baby's diaper. He replied, "Absolutely not. Just the thought of it is revolting!"

Abby, I am not saying that this particular task would be shared equally between us, but I would like to think that if I were not feeling well, or happened to be away for a few hours, my husband would assume the job if necessary.

How do you feel about this?

NAMELESS, PLEASE
 DEAR NAMELESS: I think there should be some "changes" made before you have children. And for openers, one should be your fiancée's attitude.

State Argues Against Overturning Conviction

Attorneys for the State of Nebraska Monday told the Nebraska Supreme Court the high court should not overturn the first-degree murder conviction of Nathaniel Lawrence Hall of Omaha for an August, 1964 killing.

Hall was sentenced to life imprisonment after pleading guilty to murdering Joseph Kellinghaus and is appealing the conviction under the state's post-conviction relief law.

Hall contends his plea was induced by the existence of a coerced confession.

However, the state, in a brief written by Asst. Atty. Gen. Bernard Packett, argued Hall's conviction could not be overturned unless Hall had been advised by an incompetent attorney.

Such was not the case,

Packett contended, because Hall was represented by the Douglas County Public Defender's Office.

An evidentiary hearing on Hall's charges was held in the lower court, Packett said, and no evidence was presented to substantiate his allegations, leading the lower court to deny Hall's motion.

Stahmer Offers Tax Relief Plan As Local Spending Lid

By United Press International—Omaha Sen. David Stahmer suggested Monday his property tax relief plan could become a means of putting the spending and taxation lid on local government.

Stahmer, in appearing before the Legislature's Revenue Committee, termed the measure an alternative to other property tax relief plans the Legislature has before it for consideration.

But, he said, his measure could also be amended to impose controls aimed at "holding the line" on both spending and property taxes at the local government level.

The terms of the measure would call for a roll-back at the rate of two per cent a year in the assessed value of all property in the state.

Property is currently assessed at 35% of actual value. Ultimately, under the Stahmer plan, it would be assessed at 25% of actual value.

Each year's roll-back, Stahmer told the committee, would cost about $25 million in sales and income tax replacement revenue.

However, along with the cut-back provision, the lawmaker suggested amendments which could be added to prohibit any dollar increases for one year in local property taxes.

It could also, in an amended form, prohibit any salary increases above $300 a year for local governmental subdivision employees.

In state government, he said, the move has been to impose limits on salaries. But each year, he said, "We hand out millions of dollars with no strings attached" to local government.

Or, Stahmer suggested, the bill could be amended to prohibit funding increases of various programs in excess of the average past increases over a five-year period.

The committee, however, adjourned without taking any action on that bill or another, LB1251, sponsored by Sen. Richard F. Proud of Omaha.

Proud was not present and Stahmer handled the explanation of the bill's intent for him. The bill, he said, would essentially limit the homestead property tax exemption program to persons over 65-years-old and to disabled veterans.

There is a "need to help the elderly and retired stay in their homes," Stahmer told the committee. Allowing them substantial tax breaks through the exemption program would be one way of doing it, he said.

The Nebraska Home Builders Association, however, objected to the bill saying those persons in addition to the elderly who benefit from the exemption program should not have it taken away.

Proposed Forced Membership Ban Gets Narrow First-Round Approval

By The Associated Press—After barely surviving a kill vote, a proposed constitutional amendment prohibiting anyone from being forced to join an organization to practice a profession was given narrow first-round approval in the Legislature Monday.

A motion to kill Omaha Sen. George Syas' LB979 was voted down 21-20 and was followed moments later by 25-18 approval of Syas' motion to advance the measure off general file, the first stage of floor debate. Twenty-five votes are needed to advance.

Syas said his proposal would ban what he termed "one of the greatest closed shops ever devised by man" in the law profession.

Attorneys practicing in Nebraska are now required to join the state bar association, Syas said.

"Some lawyers have told me they would join anyway, but they don't want to be forced to join," said Syas.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha offered the kill motion, calling Syas' bill "weak and ill-advised."

"This bill would not help solve the problems of administration of justice," said Chambers.

Other organizations may come before the Legislature seeking approval of required membership, Syas said, just as now exists in the law profession.

Sens. Fred Carstens of Beatrice and Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, both attorneys, spoke against the measure, saying it could lead to a lowering of standards in the legal profession if attorneys did not have to join the bar.

Other constitutional amendment proposals occupied lawmakers on the 15th legislative day of the current session.

By a 27-7 vote, lawmakers gave first round approval to Sen. Warner's LB837, submitting to voters a constitutional amendment allowing the Legislature to establish a different formula for valuing agricultural real estate located on the fringes of urban areas, for tax purposes.

Such farmland takes on added value for its potential for housing and industrial development. Warner said owners often are forced to look for non-agricultural uses for such land in order to pay the higher taxes resulting from this still-unrealized added value.

A similar constitutional amendment was submitted to Nebraska voters in 1966 and was rejected, 240,083 to 153,127.

Warner said 22 states have laws or constitutional amendments to deal with the problem dealt with in his LB837.

Lawmakers killed 25-14 a constitutional amendment proposal under which counties could be allowed to adopt a county manager form of government.

The proposal had come from the Constitutional Revision

Commission. But Sen. Ramsey Whitney of Chappell, who headed the commission, reported Monday there had been a change of heart. He said he was unable to find any counties which want the bill, LB761, and he made the motion to kill it.

Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh was sustained in a ruling that Whitney could move to kill the bill even though he was one of the original sponsors of it.

A 25-18 vote advanced from general file LB611, which would submit to voters a constitutional amendment eliminating a present "35%" requirement in constitutional amendment elections. Specifically, the proposal would remove the requirement that favoring votes on a constitutional amendment winning majority approval must total at least 35% of the voting turnout at the election.

The 25 favoring first round votes on LB611 are short of the 30 which the bill will need for final passage.

May 11 Decried Mari Sandoz Day

By resolution, Nebraska's Legislature decreed Monday that people of the state recognize May 11 as "Mari Sandoz Day."

May 11 is the birthday of the Nebraska author, credited in the resolution with portraying Nebraska pioneers "in their true light." Chadron State College has established the Mari Sandoz heritage fund to perpetuate her memory and her works.

Sen. Leslie A. Stull of Alliance, who introduced the resolution which lawmakers adopted 35-0, noted that Gov. J. J. Exon last year had designated May 11 as Mari Sandoz Day. "My intent is to make it an annual day," he said.

Top Secret Revealed

Highly confidential sources today disclosed the secret of the fantastic "Beef Eater" roast that is being served at the Holiday Inns in Lincoln, Nebraska. The secret is NOT to tenderize it or flavor it with artificial spices but rather to let the meat develop its own natural tenderness and flavor. They take a large 60-70 lb. roast of Nebraska very finest top choice beef and age it carefully for 20 days. Then it is roasted slowly, very slowly, while it bastes in its own juices. When it reaches the peak of perfection, it is carved to order and served with the natural succulent juices. Is it no wonder that everyone has "seconds" of this great Beef Eater roast? (Of course at the Holiday Inn they don't charge for "seconds" . . . that would not be fair, and besides . . . they like people.

DeCamp Scores Nixon Handling Of Indo-Pakistani Fight

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh Monday said the Nixon administration's handling of the Indo-Pakistani conflict "will in five to ten years be recognized as one of the biggest foreign policy disasters in U.S. history."

DeCamp, a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate, said that "in the near future, the loss of India will be seen to be even worse than the loss of China to the Communists."

India, DeCamp said, is "the only large functioning democracy among the underdeveloped countries," one of our longtime allies, far more populous than Pakistan and was "right from a moral standpoint."

If the present trend in foreign policy continues, he said, "we will probably lose Canada as an ally within the next five years."

There is a "need to help the elderly and retired stay in their homes," Stahmer told the committee. Allowing them substantial tax breaks through the exemption program would be one way of doing it, he said.

The Nebraska Home Builders Association, however, objected to the bill saying those persons in addition to the elderly who benefit from the exemption program should not have it taken away.

Proposed Forced Membership Ban Gets Narrow First-Round Approval

By The Associated Press

After barely surviving a kill vote, a proposed constitutional amendment prohibiting anyone from being forced to join an organization to practice a profession was given narrow first-round approval in the Legislature Monday.

A motion to kill Omaha Sen. George Syas' LB979 was voted down 21-20 and was followed moments later by 25-18 approval of Syas' motion to advance the measure off general file, the first stage of floor debate. Twenty-five votes are needed to advance.

Syas said his proposal would ban what he termed "one of the greatest closed shops ever devised by man" in the law profession.

Attorneys practicing in Nebraska are now required to join the state bar association, Syas said.

"Some lawyers have told me they would join anyway, but they don't want to be forced to join," said Syas.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha offered the kill motion, calling Syas' bill "weak and ill-advised."

"This bill would not help solve the problems of administration of justice," said Chambers.

Other organizations may come before the Legislature seeking approval of required membership, Syas said, just as now exists in the law profession.

Sens. Fred Carstens of Beatrice and Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, both attorneys, spoke against the measure, saying it could lead to a lowering of standards in the legal profession if attorneys did not have to join the bar.

Other constitutional amendment proposals occupied lawmakers on the 15th legislative day of the current session.

By a 27-7 vote, lawmakers gave first round approval to Sen. Warner's LB837, submitting to voters a constitutional amendment allowing the Legislature to establish a different formula for valuing agricultural real estate located on the fringes of urban areas, for tax purposes.

Such farmland takes on added value for its potential for housing and industrial development. Warner said owners often are forced to look for non-agricultural uses for such land in order to pay the higher taxes resulting from this still-unrealized added value.

A similar constitutional amendment was submitted to Nebraska voters in 1966 and was rejected, 240,083 to 153,127.

Warner said 22 states have laws or constitutional amendments to deal with the problem dealt with in his LB837.

Lawmakers killed 25-14 a constitutional amendment proposal under which counties could be allowed to adopt a county manager form of government.

The proposal had come from the Constitutional Revision

May 11 Decried Mari Sandoz Day

By resolution, Nebraska's Legislature decreed Monday that people of the state recognize May 11 as "Mari Sandoz Day."

May 11 is the birthday of the Nebraska author, credited in the resolution with portraying Nebraska pioneers "in their true light." Chadron State College has established the Mari Sandoz heritage fund to perpetuate her memory and her works.

Sen. Leslie A. Stull of Alliance, who introduced the resolution which lawmakers adopted 35-0, noted that Gov. J. J. Exon last year had designated May 11 as Mari Sandoz Day. "My intent is to make it an annual day," he said.

Top Secret Revealed

Highly confidential sources today disclosed the secret of the fantastic "Beef Eater" roast that is being served at the Holiday Inns in Lincoln, Nebraska. The secret is NOT to tenderize it or flavor it with artificial spices but rather to let the meat develop its own natural tenderness and flavor. They take a large 60-70 lb. roast of Nebraska very finest top choice beef and age it carefully for 20 days. Then it is roasted slowly, very slowly, while it bastes in its own juices. When it reaches the peak of perfection, it is carved to order and served with the natural succulent juices. Is it no wonder that everyone has "seconds" of this great Beef Eater roast? (Of course at the Holiday Inn they don't charge for "seconds" . . . that would not be fair, and besides . . . they like people.

DeCamp Scores Nixon Handling Of Indo-Pakistani Fight

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh Monday said the Nixon administration's handling of the Indo-Pakistani conflict "will in five to ten years be recognized as one of the biggest foreign policy disasters in U.S. history."

DeCamp, a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate, said that "in the near future, the loss of India will be seen to be even worse than the loss of China to the Communists."

India, DeCamp said, is "the only large functioning democracy among the underdeveloped countries," one of our longtime allies, far more populous than Pakistan and was "right from a moral standpoint."

If the present trend in foreign policy continues, he said, "we will probably lose Canada as an ally within the next five years."

Sen. Simpson Acts To Get Budget Out Of Committee

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

An effort was initiated in the Legislature Monday to pull the operational budget bill out of the Appropriations Committee where it has been stalled for more than a week.

Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln produced a motion to take the bill from the committee and bring it to the floor for debate.

But Simpson said he would delay consideration of the motion until Tuesday in order to give the committee an opportunity to act.

With one member, Robert Clark of Sidney, absent due to illness of his wife, Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings said, he would not call the committee into session.

Marvel said the budget bill is ready for floor consideration "as far as I'm concerned."

But a number of committee members — perhaps a majority of five — want to make further changes in the bill before it is advanced to the floor.

A number of them complained about Marvel's unwillingness to call a full committee session to consider further action. The committee has not met since Jan. 13.

"I stand ready to meet and I prefer to meet this week," Sen. Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox said.

"We should meet," Sen. Fern Hubbard Orme of Lincoln said. "There have been days we could have met."

Among proposed changes which may command a majority vote of the committee is removal of program budget limits on state agencies.

Mrs. Orme has announced her intention to pursue such a change. Marvel opposes it.

Efforts may also be undertaken to increase the University of Nebraska budget figure.

Marvel said work on the basic budget bill was substantially completed last Dec. 15, and "several attempts" to move the bill since that time have failed.

The last effort on Jan. 13 resulted in a 4-4 tie vote, with one member not voting.

Marvel told the Legislature he broke the committee into two subcommittees on penal reform and personnel in order to "keep the business of this committee moving."

Sen. John Savage, a committee member, said he would prefer to see the committee attempt to move the bill before the Legislature takes any action of its own.

Another member, Sen. Herb Nore of Genoa, said the committee has been subjected to "some real heavy arm-twisting and high level lobbying by the Lincoln delegation."

When Mrs. Orme objected to any inference that she had "twisted anyone's arm," Nore replied that he "should have said the Lincoln lobby."

Responded Savage: "Some of us dupe more easily than others."

Sen. Herbert Duis

No-Fault Alternate Rejected

By The Associated Press

A bill characterized as a possible alternative to no-fault automobile insurance drew stout opposition Monday from insurance industry representatives, and the Legislature's Banking, Commerce & Insurance Committee responded by killing the bill on a 5-2 vote.

Sen. Herbert Duis of Gothenburg, sponsor of LB1075, gave the only favoring testimony at a public hearing. A representative of the State Insurance Department, Galen Ullstrom, joined insurance company spokesmen in opposing the bill.

Assorted other no-fault auto insurance bills have been introduced at the current legislative session and await hearing before the Banking Committee.

Duis' LB1075 would have required insurance firms to offer liability policies which insure specific persons rather than specific vehicles, while prescribing minimum coverages, including $100 per week for one year for loss of time.

Duis said the bill, while it might need some refining, is designed to reduce premiums and provide better coverage, but the insurance men said the measure would not accomplish the objectives.

Lawrence A. Frazier of Lincoln, representing the Farmers Mutual Insurance Co. of Nebraska, said the bill offered nothing which cannot now be obtained from some insurers. The measure, he said, would "increase premiums, increase confusion, be impossible to rate and cause more problems than it solves."

The committee heard and sent to the floor LB1194, increasing payments to the Banking Department for certain chartering and other hearings and services. Also reported out was LB1152, affecting security posted by banks to become depositories for First Class Cities.

The committee killed 5-1 a previously heard LB1097, sponsored by Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett and dealing with the withholding of security deposits given landlords.

Student Fee Halt Could Lead To Default On Bonds

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Opponents of a bill cutting out mandatory student activity fees at state-supported colleges said such action would mean defaulting on approximately $51 million in bonds, according to University and state college officials.

And the long term result of the bill, they said, would be to prompt a "financial crisis" which could eliminate revenue bonds as a means of financing state construction.

As a result, the debate over Kearney Sen. Gerald Stromer's LB1271 took on unexpected financial overtones instead of arguments over political persuasions.

Dual Effect Noted

Merk Hobson, University of Nebraska executive vice president for academic affairs, noted that the Stromer bill, which the Education committee did not act on, would not only cut-off funds for student government and newspapers but would also eliminate student fees as a means to retire revenue bonds.

If the bill passed, Hobson said, the University and, in turn, the state would default on $26.7 million in outstanding revenue bonds used to construct dormitories, the student union and the student health center at Lincoln.

The total annual debt for retiring the bonds amounts to $1.5 million of which $547,000 comes from mandatory student fees.

Would Damage Credit

"It is extremely unlikely that the Board of Regents could meet these financial commitments without the use of a mandatory student fee," he said. "Default would seriously damage the credit of the University of Nebraska and, in turn, the State of Nebraska, and would, in all probability, eliminate any future revenue bond financing for whatever purpose."

"In my judgment, the provisions of the bill will result in arbitrary judgments which lead to suspension of other legislative decisions through the appropriations act."

The bonded indenture which the Regents were authorized to make by the Legislature includes a provision that student fees be used to pay them off. To cut off this revenue source, Hobson indicated, would be tantamount to default.

Shift Explored

Omaha Sen. Duke Snyder asked Hobson if the debt could be shifted to capital construction costs and thus financed by general and cash funds.

Hobson replied that the Legislature had felt that part of the cost of the dormitories should be borne by those who use it.

University President Durwood Varner told the eight senators that the retirement of the bonds and maintenance of the facilities account for 90% of the estimated $2 million collected annually in mandatory student fees. Only 9%, Varner said, goes to the support of student government and the Daily Nebraskan.

Likewise, Bert Overcash, legal counsel for the Board of Trustees of the State Colleges, painted a similar picture for the 4 colleges if LB1271 were to pass.

A 1969 revenue bond program which the state still owes $25 million on would be impaired by the measure, Overcash stated. He told the senators

Testimony Heard

Parents, students and teachers appeared at the public hearing to back the bill. Here's a cross-section of their testimony:

Mrs. Cleo Horstman parent: "The conferences on sexuality and revolution aren't higher education. They're what I call back-alley education."

David Beauregard, English department: "What kind of an impression of the University does this (the Daily Nebraskan and the human sexuality conference) leave in the minds of the people of this state?"

John Braeman, history professor: "A subsidized press is not a free press."

Payroll Tax Proposal Killed

The Legislature Monday buried a proposed constitutional amendment which would have authorized Lincoln, Omaha and first class cities to levy a payroll tax on non-residents who work in the city.

LB978, authored by Sen. Duke Snyder of Omaha, was erased on a lopsided 36-5 vote.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly offered the kill motion, contending that the proposed tax would be discriminatory, affecting only "outsiders who happen to be employed in the city."

Other non-residents also use

city services, Warner noted.

The only way to apply the tax equitably would be to establish "a toll gate into the city," he said.

The fact is, Warner pointed out, non-residents who use city services now help contribute through city sales taxes in both Lincoln and Omaha.

Snyder said people who "take wages from the city and use its conveniences should help pay the freight."

An estimated 32,000 non-residents work in Omaha, he noted.

When that figure is translated into family numbers, "we are supporting a city of 100,000" through resident taxes he said.

Omaha's population has increased 41% in the last 20 years, Snyder said. But its automobile count is up 134% and its public works budget has increased by eight-fold to a figure approaching $25 million a year.

Those non-residents who use the city streets daily should help support them through payment of a payroll tax since they are not required to pay the city wheel tax, Snyder suggested.

Sen. Dave Stahmer of Omaha supported Warner's motion, noting that he has a bill (LB236) awaiting floor action which would authorize an Omaha payroll tax on both residents and non-residents.

Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan wondered if Snyder's proposal might result in all senators, except members of the Lincoln delegation, paying payroll taxes on their legislative salaries to the Capital City.

"That's one of the hazards of the trade," Snyder replied.

Waldron To Request Kissack's Resignation

By United Press International

Sen. J. James Waldron of Callaway said Monday he was drafting a letter to the governor asking him to ask for the resignation of John Kissack as director of the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Waldron made the statement on the floor of the Legislature after referring to a newspaper article in which Kissack attacked a resolution by Waldron pending in committee which would eliminate two new requirements in the state motor vehicles inspection program.

The Waldron resolution would eliminate requirements which became effective Jan. 1 calling for tighter windshield requirements and the removal of a wheel and drum during the inspection.

In the article (in the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star), Kissack said he had told an interim study committee on rules and regulations, of which Waldron is a member, he was "prepared to modify or withdraw any inspection regulations which might draw a substantial amount of criticism."

But Waldron contended Monday the committee was only notified of proposed changes in the program and decided not to accept them, and was never again contacted about the rules.

The Callaway senator said he checked and found the rules went into effect Jan. 1, and then asked the motor vehicles head about it.

Waldron contended Kissack denied the rules had gone into effect until he was shown the statement which showed the rules had become effective Jan. 1.

Furthermore, Waldron said, now that the changes are in effect, they are not being enforced.

In the newspaper article, Kissack referred to Waldron as "one of those young, relatively inexperienced senators who sometimes get carried away with their own eloquence."

"If we knew the world was going to end in five minutes every phone booth would be filled with people trying to stammer out: 'I love you'."

Winter winds blew across the bay, lifting the gulls into soaring sweeps. (But we're off to blue Hawaii. Hello deh, brudda. Howzit?)

Love is the sweetest thing. Out to dinner in a foggy night where I met a girl who lost 22 pounds in two months due to love.

She said: "I couldn't eat. When I did eat, I couldn't keep it down. I thought about him all the time. I think about him now all the time."

The thing about it that's curious: This love affair is going well. Road blocks have been erased. All is rosy. Love has found a way.

Yet the tender passion is melting this chick away to bones.

She said: "I've never been so happy."

Here we are into a new year. Have not bothered myself with warm resolutions. Cold beer and warm resolutions, that's the diet for problems.

The last year ended in stormy weather. I lost a few branches but survived. That's no easy thing. It's an accomplishment. Keep your head down and never volunteer.

While having coffee, my smallest boy sneaked up behind me. He gave me a karate chop he learned watching TV.

Karate chop on the neck. Hot coffee down the shirt front. It shows you never know where it's coming from next.

Cold beer — never mind the resolutions. Beer is up in England. Up in America. Up in Australia.

New tax money is needed. A tax on beer brings votes of confidence from the dry people who would wring brew and the Devil from our souls.

The Pilgrim Fathers founded Plymouth, Mass., because they were out of beer. It's in the log of the Mayflower.

"For we could not now take time for further search or consideration, our victuals being much spent, especially our beer."

If they'd had a few more cases aboard, they'd have gone on to Miami. It might have made a great difference in the nation. Those cold New England winters make sober, serious people.

A little time in the Florida sun, they'd have all been swingers. Right, John Alden?

Australia. There's a beer drinking country, coppers. Well, it seems the Sydney dentists wanted to push fluoride — Aussies don't have good teeth and maybe it's the water.

The dentists wanted to show that nobody could tell the difference between plain water and water with fluoride. So they set up two unmarked bottles and invited the public to try it.

Everybody who took the fluoride water asked for a second glass. The dentists were delighted but puzzled. Is fluoride that good?

Not so, mates. It seems some joker had spiked the fluoride water with Scotch whisky. Always a lot of fun up in King's Cross.

Why should a girl lose 22 pounds from being in love? She flowed with happiness. Oh, my man, I love him so!

I said: "Maybe you should see a doctor."

She said: "My boy friend is a doctor."

What can you say then? "The course of true love never did run smooth." Shakespeare said that. Will had been around.

Winter winds blew across the bay, lifting the gulls into soaring sweeps. (But we're off to blue Hawaii. Hello deh, brudda. Howzit?)

Love is the sweetest thing. Out to dinner in a foggy night where I met a girl who lost 22 pounds in two months due to love.

She said: "I couldn't eat. When I did eat, I couldn't keep it down. I thought about him all the time. I think about him now all the time."

The thing about it that's curious: This love affair is going well. Road blocks have been erased. All is rosy. Love has found a way.

Yet the tender passion is melting this chick away to bones.

She said: "I've never been so happy."

☆☆☆ Here we are into a new year. Have not bothered myself with warm resolutions. Cold beer and warm resolutions, that's the diet for problems.

The last year ended in stormy weather. I lost a few branches but survived. That's no easy thing. It's an accomplishment. Keep your head down and never volunteer.

While having coffee, my smallest boy sneaked up behind me. He gave me a karate chop he learned watching TV.

Karate chop on the neck. Hot coffee down the shirt front.

It shows you never know where it's coming from next.

☆☆☆ Cold beer — never mind the resolutions. Beer is up in England. Up in America. Up in Australia.

New tax money is needed. A tax on beer brings votes of confidence from the dry people who would wring brew and the Devil from our souls.

The Pilgrim Fathers founded Plymouth, Mass., because they were out of beer. It's in the leg of the Mayflower.

"For we could not now take time for further search or consideration, our virtials being much spent, especially our beer."

If they'd had a few more cases aboard, they'd have gone on to Miami. It might have made a great difference in the nation. Those cold New England winters make sober, serious people.

A little time in the Florida sun, they'd have all been swingers. Right, John Alden?

☆☆☆ Australia. There's a beer drinking country, coppers. Well, it seems the Sydney dentists wanted to push fluoride — Aussies don't have good teeth and maybe it's the water.

The dentists wanted to show that nobody could tell the difference between plain water and water with fluoride. So they set up two unmarked bottles and invited the public to try it.

Everybody who took the fluoride water asked for a second glass. The dentists were delighted but puzzled. Is fluoride that good?

Not so, mates. It seems some joker had spiked the fluoride water with Scotch whisky. Always a lot of fun up in King's Cross.

☆☆☆ Why should a girl lose 22 pounds from being in love? She flowed with happiness. Oh, my man, I love him so!

I said: "Maybe you should see a doctor."

She said: "My boy friend is a doctor."

What can you say then? "The course of true love never did run smooth." Shakespeare said that. Will had been around.

Gets Two Prizes

Port Harcourt, Nigeria (P) — A young fisherman of Sinikiri village found a quick but dangerous way to win public office. He crept up on a sun-bathing crocodile and stabbed it to death.

The villagers, who fish for a livelihood and have been harassed by the crocodile for five years, were so elated they appointed the hero, Thomas Bunu, head of the village.

Race Fans Out-Drink Fight Fans

Anyone who was there trying to get one will probably argue about it, but the fans attending last spring's Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier fight via closed circuit into the State Fairgrounds Coliseum didn't drink as much beer as the average day's horse racing fan at the same Fairgrounds.

Beer receipts from that fight, according to the financial statement released Monday by State Fair manager Henry Brandt, totaled $1,149 and at 50 cents per can that figures out to 2,298 cans of the pop.

Horse racing fans at the State Fairgrounds last summer consumed 4,996 cups of the stuff daily and even figuring that it takes three cups to equal two cans, the bettors still win.

If the boxing fans, however, want to argue for their side, they can point out that they didn't have 25 minutes between rounds in the fight as the racing fans have between races and thus their feats had to be concentrated before the fight began.

Within the State Fair itself, auto racing was the biggest revenue-producer with gross receipts of $35,016.

An item worth noting certainly is one in the report which shows the state's appropriation to the State Fair for the period July 1, 1971, to June 30, 1972, totaled only $53,660. At the same time, the Fairgrounds racing meet gave the state better than $209,000 in pari-mutual tax and another $15,500 in admissions tax. Attention Jim Studnicka.

Morale Seats For Colorado

A couple of years ago in an effort to hypo season ticket sales to its football games, Colorado offered fans the chance to buy the tickets with a bank charge card.

Last season they came up with another way to hypo those same sales — winning and finishing third in the final Associated Press poll.

The bank charge card plan didn't amount to any noticeable increase in the demand for season tickets; the winning thing did and it's got Colorado football coach and athletic director Eddie Crowder studying ways of increasing the seating capacity at Folsom Field to 53,000.

The Buffs play both No. 1 ranked Nebraska and No. 2 rated Oklahoma in Boulder next fall.

Officials estimate that when all the bills are paid, the third annual Lincoln PBA Open Bowling Tournament will wind up with a $200 figure being written in red ink.

Every television network has taken various looks at the people who flash across your picture tube every weekend, but now CBS-TV is going to take a comical look at you at 8:30 tonight in a special entitled, "I'm A Fan."

Can't Defense Wishbone

Alabama's Bear Bryant admits he probably shouldn't say it after what Nebraska did to his wishbone-T in the Orange Bowl, but he says it anyway, "I don't think you can defend the wishbone."

Bryant claims one of the wishbone-T is going to do is force coaches to recruit or to put top athletes in their defensive secondary "because the wishbone forces one-on-one coverage in the secondary."

An Alabama assistant coach preparing to show the Crimson Tide's 1971 highlights film at the coaches' convention recently in Florida prefaced the showing with, "This film includes only 11 games because we didn't dare put the Nebraska game in it."

UCLA Unanimous No. 1 Selection In AP Poll

By Associated Press

Top-ranked UCLA scored a shutout in The Associated Press college basketball poll Monday, sweeping every first-place ballot off the boards.

The Bruins, the season's first unanimous No. 1 choice, picked off 43 top ballots from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters for a hefty point total of 860.

UCLA received the acclaim after impressive triumphs over Santa Clara and Denver last week that enhanced the Bruins' record to 29 straight victories, including 14 this season.

Marquette was a near-unanimous choice for second, the spot it held last week. The Warriors, however, trimmed eight points off UCLA's margin and totaled 772 this time.

Like UCLA, Marquette is 14-0 this year.

The West Coast stock moved up in the rest of the Top Ten as Long Beach State, a nearby UCLA neighbor, jumped one position to third after improving its mark to 15-1. The 49ers got 582 points.

Southern California, within a few miles of UCLA, moved closer in the poll, going from eighth to seventh after an idle week. The voters gave the Trojans 553 points.

Virginia, Penna and Florida State each moved up a spot to Nos. 8-9-10, respectively, to fill out the Top Ten.

Louisville, winner of 12 straight games, bounded two spots to No. 4 with 523 points. North Carolina, an upset victim to Duke over the weekend, dropped two to No. 5 with 483. Ohio State, No. 7 a week ago, went to No. 6 with 412.

UCLA (14-0) 860
1. Marquette 772
2. Santa Clara 772

Weigh-Ins Set For 'Gloves'

Weigh-ins for the Southeast District Golden Gloves Championships to be held Wednesday and Thursday night at Lincoln's Pershing Auditorium will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. Wednesday in Room 124 at the auditorium.

Eldro Hansen, co-chairman of the sponsoring Lincoln Master Barbers Association, said fighters would be given a two-pound weight allowance as in past years.

He also emphasized that extremely long hair would not be permitted nor would long beards be allowed.

Hansen said team scoring would be on the basis of five points for a champion, three points for a runner-up and one point for a losing semifinalist.

Sharing refereeing chores will be Larry Emery of Omaha and Bill Engel of South Sioux City. Judges will be Dave Hendricks, Jerry McGinn, Ralph Cox and Henry Acquire, all of Lincoln.

Tickets are available in advance at the Pershing Auditorium box office, Hansen noted.

Cipriano Hoping Practice Goals Accomplished

... HUSKERS RETURN TO ACTION WEDNESDAY AT OKLAHOMA STATE

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Joe Cipriano will know better late Wednesday night if last week's practices have accomplished their pre-designated goals. "I think we have done what we wanted to get done, but we really won't know until we play," said Nebraska's basketball coach, who takes his Huskies to Stillwater, Okla., Wednesday to meet Oklahoma State.

After downing Colorado on Jan. 15, the Huskers have drilled primarily on different situations in covering postmen, timing and various presses during the 11-day layoff.

Speaking Monday at NU's weekly press briefing, Cipriano said NU's lofty Big Eight Conference position and the Cowboys' last-place ranking hopefully would fail to give NU an overconfident attitude.

"It can work both ways, of course," he said. "But I would hope that our team wouldn't go down there and be bothered by the pressure. You can go down there and overlook them, but we're in a position to stay on top and I'm sure our kids realize that."

The Huskers lead the Big Eight with a 3-0 slate while OSU is winless in five league encounters and sports just two triumphs in 17 contests. Besides that, Nebraska has already defeated the Oklahoma Sooners — 64-56 at the Big Eight Tournament in Kansas City and 73-59 at the Coliseum.

"It will be an interesting game from our standpoint — it's our first road game (in conference activity)," Cipriano noted. "I'm still going by what I said earlier — to win the Big Eight you've got to win at home and split on the road."

But injuries have struck NU.

Senior guard Al Nissen, who returned to practices Sunday, is bothered by a sprained ankle. His backcourt partner, Tony Riehl, suffered the same fate Jan. 10 against Oklahoma and is still "limping," according to Cipriano.

That might push junior Tom Gregory into a starter's role Wednesday night at Gallagher Hall.

"He's played awfully well in practice," Cipriano said. "And I'm not so sure he's so far away from a starting guard's spot."

The senior left-handed frontline of 6-10 center Chuck Jura and forwards Tom Bryan (6-5) and Mike Peterson (6-8) remains intact.

Anticipating OSU and its patented deliberate-style repertoire, Cipriano emphasized that "our team has to adjust to the way people are playing us."

"This will be their third game in five days, but we've had that 11-day layoff," he said. "I hope we'll be ready for them."

NU will continue its non-Lincoln appearances with a Saturday night date at Kansas where the Huskers haven't been victorious since 1962.

BARBER WINS PLAYOFF

—LINCOLN RACING—

Plea Continues For New Plant

By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

The 1971 State Fairgrounds horse race meeting gave more money to the State of Nebraska than ever before. It gave a record amount of money to horsemen in purses. But it had less money left for itself than at any time in the past five years.

The state's treasury received a record $209,160.08 in pari-mutual taxes from a record betting handle of $6,229,002 and horsemen collected a record $338,004 in purses, but after paying these and other expenses involved in running the race meet, only $87,620.12 remained as the profit from the 1971 meeting, the lowest figure in five years.

With these figures in mind, State Fair manager Henry Brandt and Fair Board president Don Thompson continued their fight for a new racing facility as they addressed the annual meeting of the Nebraska Association of Fair Managers Monday.

Citing the coolest weather in recent memory during the Lincoln racing meet last summer as a key factor in the record attendance of 128,257 which contributes to the other records, Brandt observed, "I think this is an excellent indication of what could happen if we had man-made weather in a modern up-dated racing facility."

By man-made weather he was referring to an air-conditioned grandstand for the bettors' comfort.

"There is no doubt in my mind that with new facilities over a five-year period we could double our attendance and handle," he added. "The state's investment in a new race plant would pay off with the doubling of the pari-mutual tax that would be paid over a period of years."

Thompson extended his thanks to the horsemen, jockeys and racing fans for their continued support of the Lincoln race meeting "despite the out-moded facilities," but hinted that continued racing at the Lincoln plant might be in jeopardy unless something is done about the antiquated facility.

Thompson pointed out that in the last six years, the Fairgrounds race meet has given the State of Nebraska $1,114,385.57.

In addition to the money paid to the state outright in the form of pari-mutual tax, Thompson noted that horse racing pays most of the expenses of putting on the State Fair each year.

"If racing were discontinued, the State Board of Agriculture would have to call upon the State of Nebraska for full financial support of the State Fair as is the case with most state fairs in the United States," Thompson noted. "The State Fair has depended almost exclusively upon the profit of racing for its capital construction and maintenance."

Sinks Putt To Cease 21-Hole Tilt

Tucson, Ariz. (AP) — "We were both about ready to fall down," weary Miller Barber said Monday after outlasting George Archer over a history-making 21-hole playoff for the title and the $30,000 first prize in the Dean Martin-Tucson Open golf tournament.

Barber, a balding portly, 40-year-old veteran, rolled in an 18-foot birdie putt on the third hole of a sudden-death playoff after he and the 6-5 Archer had matched par 72s over the scheduled 18 holes.

They had tied after the regulation 72 holes over the cactus-studded Tucson National Golf Club course Sunday with 15-under-par totals of 273.

At 7,305 yards, with lengthy stretches of desert between greens and tees, the course is the longest the pros play on the tour and the 93 holes left both players reeling with weariness.

"We were both just worn out," said Barber. "Just whipped mentally after fighting this thing for 90 holes. It was more mental than physical."

It was the longest playoff in pro golf history since Lloyd Mangrum beat Vic Ghezzi and Byron Nelson over 36 extra holes for the 1946 U.S. Open title at Canterbury in Cleveland.

But that one was set up differently. After they tied over 18 holes, another 18 was scheduled. This one went three sudden-death holes after the 18.

Archer just missed on the low side from 35 feet for a birdie on the 18th hole of the playoff, a shot that would have won it, looked at Barber and shook his head in frustration.

Archer, who won an 18-hole playoff over Dave Hill and Tommy Aaron for the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open title just two weeks ago, left the course immediately after finishing play and was not available for comment.

Archer picked up $17,100 for his second playoff in three weeks.

All playoff participants in both tournaments received an additional $5,000 from the national television network.

Archer now has earned more than $48,000 in just three weeks this season.

"The putt that won it was at just about the same place, maybe a foot closer, than the one I had the first time we played it today," Barber said.

That was on the par three 17th. They had started the sudden death portion on the 15th hole for television purposes.

And it was on the 17th that Archer finally pulled even after trailing by as many as three strokes on the warm, sunny day.

He laced a four iron shot to 30 inches and made the putt that set up the sudden death.

NO GOOD . . . Miller Barber misses on this 30-foot birdie putt, but went on to win tourney.

Class B, C Leaders Maintain Top Spots

... FAIRBURY, DAVID CITY LEADING

By VIRGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

There are 192 high school basketball teams in Classes B and C, yet the top ten ratings in the two divisions feature just a pair of new faces this week.

While Fairbury continues to rank No. 1 in Class B and David City remains the kingpin in Class C, Loup City makes its first appearance in the B division, and North Loup-Scotia joins the select circle in Class C for the first time.

It's the most stability either listing has shown all season.

The Class B top ten is without a change through the first seven teams. The seven pacesetters played a total of 11 games during the past week and won them all.

But Holdrege, No. 8 a week ago, stumbled to Minden on Friday night — a team that was then beaten by unranked Class C Geneva the next evening — and falls from the group.

Superior and Elkhorn, ninth and tenth a week ago, benefit from Holdrege's misfortune and each moves up a notch.

That lets Loup City, with a 10-2 record, the chance to claim the final rung on the Class B ratings ladder. The Red Raiders dropped both games during a Christmas holiday tournament, but have claimed ten straight regular season encounters.

This weekend could be a big one for Loup City when it hosts No. 2 ranked and unbeaten Cozad.

Class C doesn't have a single change through the first nine positions. The nine clubs played a total of 19 games last week. The only loss occurred when No. 3 rated Henderson scored a come-from-behind victory over No. 7 ranked Milford.

Milford doesn't lose ground, however, having held a 13-point edge in the third quarter of the contest before losing out.

The only change in Class C occurs as North Loup-Scotia, with a perfect 11-0 record, replaces Minatare in the final position.

Geneva, despite an overall 6-7 record against a lot of good Class B teams, Hebron and Medicine Valley are closely pressing the top ten.

One new district leader — these are the teams now favored to win the season-ending district tournaments and thus have the best shot at a state tourney berth — emerges this week as Southeast Consolidated replaces Johnson-Brock in district C-1.

Top-ranked UCLA scored a shutout in The Associated Press college basketball poll Monday, sweeping every first-place ballot off the boards.

The Bruins, the season's first unanimous No. 1 choice, picked off 43 top ballots from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters for a hefty point total of 860.

UCLA received the acclaim after impressive triumphs over Santa Clara and Denver last week that enhanced the Bruins' record to 29 straight victories, including 14 this season.

Marquette was a near-unanimous choice for second, the spot it held last week. The Warriors, however, trimmed eight points off UCLA's margin and totaled 772 this time.

Like UCLA, Marquette is 14-0 this year.

The West Coast stock moved up in the rest of the Top Ten as Long Beach State, a nearby UCLA neighbor, jumped one position to third after improving its mark to 15-1. The 49ers got 582 points.

Southern California, within a few miles of UCLA, moved closer in the poll, going from eighth to seventh after an idle week. The voters gave the Trojans 353 points.

Virginia, Penn and Florida State each moved up a spot to Nos. 8-9-10, respectively, to fill out the Top Ten.

Louisville, winner of 12 straight games, bounded two spots to No. 4 with 523 points. North Carolina, an upset victim to Duke over the weekend, dropped two to No. 5 with 483.

Ohio State, No. 7 a week ago, went to No. 6 with 412.

UCLA (43) 860
Marquette (31) 772
Long Beach State (25) 725
Louisville (22) 523
North Carolina (22) 483

Weigh-Ins Set For 'Gloves'

Weigh-ins for the Southeast District Golden Gloves Championships to be held Wednesday and Thursday night at Lincoln's Pershing Auditorium will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. Wednesday in Room 124 at the auditorium.

Eldro Hansen, co-chairman of the sponsoring Lincoln Master Barbers Association, said fighters would be given a two-pound weight allowance as in past years.

He also emphasized that extremely long hair would not be permitted nor would long beards be allowed.

Hansen said team scoring would be on the basis of five points for a champion, three points for a runner-up and one point for a losing semifinalist.

Sharing refereeing chores will be Larry Emery of Omaha and Bill Engel of South Sioux City. Judges will be Dave Hendricks, Jerry McGinn, Ralph Cox and Henry Acquire, all of Lincoln.

Tickets are available in advance at the Pershing Auditorium box office, Hansen noted.

Cipriano Hoping Practice Goals Accomplished

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Joe Cipriano will know better late Wednesday night if last week's practices have accomplished their pre-designated goals.

"I think we have done what we wanted to get done, but we really won't know until we play," said Nebraska's basketball coach, who takes his Huskies to Stillwater, Okla., Wednesday to meet Oklahoma State.

After downing Colorado on Jan. 15, the Huskers have drilled primarily on different situations in covering postmen, timing and various presses during the 11-day layoff.

Speaking Monday at NU's weekly press briefing, Cipriano said NU's lofty Big Eight Conference position and the Cowboys' last-place ranking hopefully would fail to give NU an overconfident attitude.

"It can work both ways, of course," he said. "But I would hope that our team wouldn't go down there and be bothered by the pressure. You can go down there and overlook them, but we're in a position to stay on top and I'm sure our kids realize that."

The Huskers lead the Big Eight with a 3-0 slate while OSU is winless in five league encounters and sports just two triumphs in 17 contests. Besides that, Nebraska has already defeated the Oklahomans twice — 64-56 at the Big Eight Tournament in Kansas City and 73-59 at the Coliseum.

"It will be an interesting game from our standpoint — it's our first road game (in conference activity)," Cipriano noted. "I'm still going by what I said earlier — to win the Big Eight you've got to win at home and split on the road."

But injuries have struck NU.

Senior guard Al Nissen, who returned to practices Sunday, is bothered by a sprained ankle. His backcourt partner, Tony Riehl, suffered the same fate Jan. 10 against Oklahoma and is still "limping," according to Cipriano.

That might push junior Tom Gregory into a starter's role Wednesday night at Gallagher Hall.

"He's played awfully well in practice," Cipriano said. "And I'm not so sure he's so far away from a starting guard's spot."

The senior left-handed frontline of 6-10 center Chuck Jura and forwards Tom Bryan (6-5) and Mike Peterson (6-8) remains intact.

Anticipating OSU and its patented deliberate-style repertoire, Cipriano emphasized that "our team has to adjust to the way people are playing us."

"This will be their third game in five days, but we've had that 11-day layoff," he said. "I hope we'll be ready for them."

NU will continue its non-Lincoln appearances with a Saturday night date at Kansas where the Huskers haven't been victorious since 1962.

Sinks Putt To Cease 21-Hole Tilt

Tucson, Ariz. (AP) — "We were both about ready to fall down," weary Miller Barber said Monday after outlasting George Archer over a history-making 21-hole playoff for the title and the $30,000 first prize in the Dean Martin-Tucson Open golf tournament.

Barber, a balding portly, 40-year-old veteran, rolled in an 18-foot birdie putt on the third hole of a sudden-death playoff after he and the 6-5 Archer had matched par 72s over the scheduled 18 holes.

They had tied after the regulation 72 holes over the cactus-studded Tucson National Golf Club course Sunday with 15-under-par totals of 273.

At 7,305 yards, with lengthy stretches of desert between greens and tees, the course is the longest the pros play on the tour and the 93 holes left both players reeling with weariness.

"We were both just worn out," said Barber. "Just whipped mentally after fighting this thing for 90 holes. It was more mental than physical."

It was the longest playoff in pro golf history since Lloyd Mangrum beat Vic Ghezzi and Byron Nelson over 36 extra holes for the 1946 U.S. Open title at Canterbury in Cleveland.

But that one was set up differently. After they tied over 13 holes, another 18 was scheduled. This one went three sudden-death holes after the 18.

Archer just missed on the low side from 35 feet for a birdie on the 18th hole of the playoff, a shot that would have won it, looked at Barber and shook his head in frustration.

Archer, who won an 18-hole playoff over Dave Hill and Tommy Aaron for the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open title just two weeks ago, left the course immediately after finishing play and was not available for comment.

Archer picked up $17,100 for his second playoff in three weeks.

All playoff participants in both tournaments received an additional $5,000 from the national television network.

Archer now has earned more than $48,000 in just three weeks this season.

"The putt that won it was at just about the same place, maybe a foot closer, than the one I had the first time we played it today," Barber said.

That was on the par three 17th. They had started the sudden death portion on the 15th hole for television purposes.

And it was on the 17th that Archer finally pulled even after trailing by as many as three strokes on the warm, sunny day.

He laced a four iron shot to 30 inches and made the putt that set up the sudden death.

Midland Tourney Pairings Ready

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Tom Gorman, top seeded American in the 16-man field, will meet Georges Goven, No. 1 ranked French player in the opening match of the Midland International Indoor Tennis championships scheduled to open here Wednesday.

Ilie Nastase, No. 1 seeded among the foreign entries will not make an appearance until Thursday evening. He meets Mike Belkin of Canada.

Other singles pairings in the tourney, fifth in a 13-city tour include:

Wednesday: Bill Brown vs Andre Gimeno; Alex Olaedo vs Jaime Fillol; and Frank A. Froehling III vs Ion Tiriac.

Thursday: Jim Connors vs Milan Holocet; Tom Edelfsen vs Manuel Orantes; and Erik Van Dillen vs Thomaz Koch.

The doubles competition pairings will be drawn after the players arrive.

NO GOOD . . . Miller Barber misses on this 30-foot birdie putt, but went on to win tourney.

Class B, C Leaders Maintain Top Spots

... FAIRBURY, DAVID CITY LEADING

Prep Sports Writer

There are 192 high school basketball teams in Classes B and C, yet the top ten ratings in the two divisions feature just a pair of new faces this week.

While Fairbury continues to rank No. 1 in Class B and David City remains the kingpin in Class C, Loup City makes its first appearance in the B division, and North Loup-Scotia joins the select circle in Class C for the first time.

It's the most stability either listing has shown all season.

The Class B top ten is without a change through the first seven teams. The seven pacesetters played a total of 11 games during the past week and won them all.

But Holdrege, No. 8 a week ago, stumbled to Minden on Friday night — a team that was then beaten by unranked Class C Geneva the next evening — and falls from the group.

Superior and Elkhorn, ninth and tenth a week ago, benefit from Holdrege's misfortune and each moves up a notch.

That lets Loup City, with a 10-2 record, the chance to claim the final rung on the Class B ratings ladder. The Red Raiders dropped both games during a Christmas holiday tournament, but have claimed ten straight regular season encounters.

This weekend could be a big one for Loup City when it hosts No. 2 ranked and unbeaten Cozad.

Class C doesn't have a single change through the first nine positions. The nine clubs played a total of 19 games last week. The only loss occurred when No. 3 rated Henderson scored a come-from-behind victory over No. 7 ranked Milford.

Milford doesn't lose ground, however, having held a 13-point edge in the third quarter of the contest before losing out.

The only change in Class C occurs as North Loup-Scotia, with a perfect 11-0 record, replaces Minatare in the final position.

Geneva, despite an overall 6-7 record against a lot of good Class B teams, Hebron and Medicine Valley are closely pressing the top ten.

One new district leader — these are the teams now favored to win the season-ending district tournaments and thus have the best shot at a state tourney berth — emerges this week as Southeast Consolidated replaces Johnson-Brock in district C-1.

Plea Continues For New Plant

By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

The 1971 State Fairgrounds horse race meeting gave more money to the State of Nebraska than ever before. It gave a record amount of money to horsemen in purses. But it had less money left for itself than at any time in the past five years.

The state's treasury received a record $209,160.08 in pari-mutuel taxes from a record betting handle of $6,229,002 and horsemen collected a record $338,004 in purses, but after paying these and other expenses involved in running the race meet, only $87,620.12 remained as the profit from the 1971 meeting, the lowest figure in five years.

With these figures in mind, State Fair manager Henry Brandt and Fair Board president Don Thompson continued their fight for a new racing facility as they addressed the annual meeting of the Nebraska Association of Fair Managers Monday.

Citing the coolest weather in recent memory during the Lincoln racing meet last summer as a key factor in the record attendance of 128,257 which contributes to the other records, Brandt observed, "I think this is an excellent indication of what could happen if we had man-made weather in a modern up-dated racing facility."

By man-made weather he was referring to an air-conditioned grandstand for the bettors' comfort.

"There is no doubt in my mind that with new facilities over a five-year period we could double our attendance and handle," he added. "The state's investment in a new race plant would pay off with the doubling of the pari-mutuel tax that would be paid over a period of years."

Thompson extended his thanks to the horsemen, jockeys and racing fans for their continued support of the Lincoln race meeting "despite the out-moded facilities," but hinted that continued racing at the Lincoln plant might be in jeopardy unless something is done about the antiquated facility.

Thompson pointed out that in the last six years, the Fairgrounds race meet has given the State of Nebraska $1,114,385.57.

In addition to the money paid to the state outright in the form of pari-mutuel tax, Thompson noted that horse racing pays most of the expenses of putting on the State Fair each year.

"If racing were discontinued, the State Board of Agriculture would have to call upon the State of Nebraska for full financial support of the State Fair as is the case with most state fairs in the United States," Thompson noted. "The State Fair has depended almost exclusively upon the profit of racing for its capital construction and maintenance."

Realignment, Pensions Under NHL Discussion

... AT TWIN CITIES MEETINGS

Bloomington, Minn. (UPI) — The National Hockey League Monday admitted two new franchises upon payment of $700,000 and the NHL Players Association announced that Tuesday it would ask the league for a 150 per cent increase in playoff benefits.

Representatives of the new Long Island and Atlanta teams each paid $350,000 to the league to be welcomed officially as members. Each must pay an additional $1.4 million by May 31.

Atlanta will complete its payments of its $6 million membership fee in 1977 and Long Island will complete payment of $11 million, including $5 million indemnity to the New York Rangers, in 1991.

Commissioner Clarence Campbell said the owners agreed that the 1972-73 schedule would require 78 games, the same number played this year, and will run from Oct. 3 through April 1. But realignment of the 16 teams into divisions was deferred until Tuesday.

Campbell said only two alignments would be considered, separation into four divisions of four teams each, or two eight-team divisions which would not necessarily include the same teams now in the east and west divisions. He said that the makeup of the four-team divisions was agreed upon and that 13 of the 14 previous members had approved the proposal, but the shift must be accepted unanimously.

It was learned that the four-division setup called for New York, Atlanta, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia to comprise one quarter; Toronto, Montreal, Buffalo and Vancouver in another, Minnesota, Chicago, Los Angeles and California in the third, and Boston, Detroit, St. Louis and Long Island in the fourth.

Detroit, it was understood, was the sole opponent because the Red Wings wanted a Canadian team in their division.

Wyoming Hits 'Jays, 76-65

Laramie, Wyo. (UPI) — Franklin Ervin had 18 points and 12 rebounds while Rod Penner added 17 points and 11 rebounds to boost Wyoming to a 76-65 win over Creighton in a non-conference clash Monday night.

Gene Harmon was the only Creighton player in double figures as he rolled to a game high of 28 points.

Denny Mountz had 16 points and Ken Randle 15 for Wyoming.

The win boosted Wyoming's overall record to 9-7, while Creighton dropped to 8-7. Both teams came up with 29 turnovers and each squad snared 34 rebounds.

In addition to alignment on Tuesday the league will discuss the points brought up by the players, and spokesman Alan Eagleson, who represents "about 75" NHL players as well as the association, said the major point would be to increase playoff pay.

Eagleson said the players believed they should receive $25,000 per man for finishing first in either division and then advancing through the playoffs to win the Stanley Cup. A team performing such a feat now would receive $10,000 per man.

Radakovich Named Coach At Colorado

Boulder, Colo. (AP) — Dan Radakovich, a member of the Pittsburgh Steeler defensive coaching staff, was named defensive coordinator of the University of Colorado Monday.

Radakovich, 36, joined the National Football League club for the 1971 season following 13 years at Penn State and one with the University of Cincinnati.

At CU he replaces Jerry Claiborne, who resigned following the 1971 season to become head football coach at the University of Maryland.

Kansas Topples ISU, 74-71

Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — Tom Kivisto and Aubrey Nash took command in the final three minutes and sparked Kansas to a 74-71 Big Eight basketball victory over Iowa State Monday night.

With the score tied 67-all, Kivisto hit a jump shot and a pair of free throws to get Kansas rolling toward the hectic triumph. He helped in the vital ball-handling department in the clutch.

It was Kivisto's long down-court pass to Neal Mask that gave the Jayhawks a 74-71 lead with 11 seconds to go after the Cyclones had cut it to 72-71 on a shot by Wayne Williams.

Iowa State led by as many as 11 points in the first half and was ahead, 38-30, at intermission.

Bud Stallworth, who topped all scorers with 24 points, helped the Jays steadily narrow the gap until they got their first tie, 47-47, with 11 minutes to go.

The victory left Kansas 3-1 in Big Eight play and 6-9 over-all. Iowa State is now 1-4 in the league and 8-9 for the season.

High for the Cyclones was Clinton Harris, with 18 points.

Pettes Sparks OU Victory

Norman, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma routed Oklahoma State 82-68 in a renewal of the bedlam series Monday night in Norman before a crowd of 4,500.

The Sooners and Cowpokes were locked in a close battle during the first half until Oklahoma pulled away for a 45-24 halftime lead.

The second half was all Oklahoma as the Sooners ran their lead to as many as 20 points before coach John MacLeod began clearing his bench.

OU was sparked by the overall play and shooting of senior forward Andrew Pettes. He tossed in 22 points and pulled down eight rebounds. Senior Bobby Jack and sophomore Ted Evans accounted for 13 points each to help lead the Sooners.

The Cowboys were paced by senior guard Jerry Clack who hit 18 points.

The Sooners ran their record to 7-6 overall with a 3-1 conference mark. OSU is now 2-15 overall, and 0-5 in the Big Eight.

Uecker Figures He Met God A Few Days Ago—In Omaha

... AMAZED AT NEBRASKANS STANDING EVERY TIME DEVANEY NAME MENTIONED AT BANQUET

By MILTON RICHMAN
Milwaukee (UPI) — Bob Uecker will never get over it. He's still going around with a funny, faraway look in his eyes.

"I met God," he says quietly, with the appropriate reverence. "I never thought I would, but I did. In Omaha, Neb., the other night. Everytime Bob Devaney's name was mentioned people immediately stood up. About eight times! I got up three times myself. After that I just clapped."

Bob Uecker does everything deadpan. He played ball that way and does all his comedy the same way.

The 37-year-old, curly-haired ex-catcher for the Braves, Cardinals and Phillies is one of the funniest, most natural stand-up comics around today. He turns off some of the humor, though, when he talks about meeting Bob Devaney, coach of Nebraska's national major college football champs.

"He's gotta be a tremendous man," says Uecker. "I've never seen anyone looked up to like that in my life."

The major league scouts missed the boat on Uecker. They all said he'd never make it big. But he is now. For a guy with a lifetime .200 batting average who never was really more than a backup receiver in the majors, Bob Uecker is rapidly moving to the top in the entertainment field.

As a ballplayer his best salary was $22,500. Now he gets a thousand a night and is in constant demand. He has been on Johnny Carson's Tonight Show nine times and has also appeared on the David Frost, Merv Griffin, Mike Douglas and Today shows.

Within the past 10 days, he performed in Miami, Omaha, Houston and Milford, Del. Last night, he was the headliner here at the Milwaukee Baseball Writer's Dinner and his next scheduled stops are Harrisburg, Lancaster and Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

Uecker, who heads the Milwaukee Brewers' Speakers Bureau and will do TV color commentary for them this year, put in his last active season with Atlanta in 1967. That means he becomes eligible for baseball's Hall of Fame next winter, but he isn't waiting around a telephone.

"Thrills?" he says. "I had plenty. I guess my biggest one was an intentional walk from Sandy Koufax in 1962, although the Dodgers did get a letter from the commissioner the next day. And who can ever forget the bases-loaded walk I got to drive in the winning run in our first intra-squad game of the 1963 spring season?"

With a perfectly straight face Uecker gets up on the dais and says: "People around the country have called me one of the greatest players ever to play the game. These people unfortunately know nothing about baseball."

He concedes he never got the publicity of some of his teammates like Hank Aaron, Joe Torre or Warren Spahn.

"Sometimes," Uecker says, "When a writer would come in the clubhouse I'd soap my body up tremendously just so maybe he's ask 'who is that?'"

All the fun Uecker pokes at his baseball career, his wife, Joyce, looks at those six years he spent in the majors differently. "I didn't laugh when he played," she says. "I thought he was great."

Bob Uecker isn't going to argue that one with his wife.

He puts his baseball career in perfect perspective, however, when he talks about the day he'll always remember. That was his last one in the majors — the day the Braves handed him his release.

"That's a tough time for a player and a manager," Uecker says, choking up a little. "A manager has to use a little finesse. I remember how Luman Harris did it with me. He called me over and told me 'No visitors allowed in the clubhouse.'"

—HOWARD TO REJOIN TEAM NEXT WEEK— Things Looking Up For Bellevue Five

By STEVE GILLISPIE
Star Sports Writer

Things are looking up for Bellevue College's basketball team despite a 3-14 record.

John Howard will join the Bruins on Feb. 2 after not attending school the first semester because of financial problems. Howard, a 6-2 starter last year, is expected to help Bellevue improve its record.

"John was a good all-around ball player for our last season," said Bruin coach Roger Nieveen.

"He was scoring in double figures, our top rebounder and played well on defense. With John we hope to better last year's record," Nieveen said.

Bellevue, only in its fourth year of operation, was 5-17 last season after switching to a schedule which included mostly four-year schools.

The Bruins were 6-17 their first year and 13-10 the second. However, most of Bellevue's opponents the first two seasons were junior colleges, technical schools or junior varsity teams of four-year colleges.

"We probably couldn't have not played mostly four-year schools for another year," Nieveen said.

"But we had to switch over sometime since Bellevue is a four-year college. We've been competitive in most games, but we're still a young team," he pointed out.

There are three juniors, two sophomores and seven freshmen on the current Bruin roster.

"We've been playing better in recent games because our defense has improved," Nieveen said. "And it'll have to continue to get better if we're going to meet our goal."

Bellevue had a two-game winning streak broken Saturday night when Mount Marty took a 74-45 victory.

However, the game did have good points which pleased Nieveen. "We were down by 14 points at halftime, but came back to go ahead before losing," he said.

The Bruins face a big challenge this week with three games against formidable teams, the last games the Bruins will play without Howard.

Bellevue will play Manhattan, Kan., Bible and Parsons, Iowa, on the road before hosting Peru at home. "If we are at least competitive in those games we'll be all right," Nieveen said.

Uecker Figures He Met God A Few Days Ago—In Omaha

... AMAZED AT NEBRASKANS STANDING EVERY TIME DEVANEY NAME MENTIONED AT BANQUET

By MILTON RICHMAN
Milwaukee (UPI) — Bob Uecker will never get over it.
He's still going around with a funny, faraway look in his eyes.
"I met God," he says quietly, with the appropriate reverence. "I never thought I would, but I did. In Omaha, Neb., the other night. Everytime Bob Devaney's name was mentioned people immediately stood up. About eight times! I got up three times myself. After that I just clapped."
Bob Uecker does everything deadpan. He played ball that way and does all his comedy the same way.
The 37-year-old, curly-haired ex-catcher for the Braves, Cardinals and Phillies is one of the funniest, most natural stand-up comics around today. He turns off some of the humor, though, when he talks about meeting Bob Devaney, coach of Nebraska's national major college football champs.

"He's gotta be a tremendous man," says Uecker. "I've never seen anyone looked up to like that in my life."
The major league scouts missed the boat on Uecker.
They all said he'd never make it big. But he is now. For a guy with a lifetime .200 batting average who never was really more than a backup receiver in the majors, Bob Uecker is rapidly moving to the top in the entertainment field.
As a ballplayer his best salary was $22,500. Now he gets a thousand a night and is in constant demand. He has been on Johnny Carson's Tonight Show nine times and has also appeared on the David Frost, Merv Griffin, Mike Douglas and Today shows.
Within the past 10 days, he performed in Miami, Omaha, Houston and Milford, Del. Last night, he was the headliner here at the Milwaukee Baseball Writer's Dinner and his next scheduled stops are Harrisburg, Lancaster and Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

Uecker, who heads the Milwaukee Brewers' Speakers Bureau and will do TV color commentary for them this year, put in his last active season with Atlanta in 1967. That means he becomes eligible for baseball's Hall of Fame next winter, but he isn't waiting around a telephone.
"Thrills?" he says. "I had plenty. I guess my biggest one was an intentional walk from Sandy Koufax in 1962, although the Dodgers did get a letter from the commissioner the next day. And who can ever forget the bases-loaded walk I got to drive in the winning run in our first intra-squad game of the 1963 spring season?"
With a perfectly straight face Uecker gets up on the dais and says: "People around the country have called me one of the greatest players ever to play the game. These people unfortunately know nothing about baseball."
He concedes he never got the publicity of some of his teammates like Hank Aaron, Joe Torre or Warren Spahn.
"Sometimes," Uecker says, "When a writer would come in the clubhouse I'd soap my body up tremendously just so maybe he'd ask 'who is that?'"
All the fun Uecker pokes at his baseball career, his wife, Joyce, looks at those six years he spent in the majors differently. "I didn't laugh when he played," she says. "I thought he was great."
Bob Uecker isn't going to argue that one with his wife.

He puts his baseball career in perfect perspective, however, when he talks about the day he'll always remember. That was his last one in the majors — the day the Braves handed him his release.
"That's a tough time for a player and a manager," Uecker says, choking up a little. "A manager has to use a little finesse. I remember how Luman Harris did it with me. He called me over and told me 'No visitors allowed in the clubhouse.'"

—HOWARD TO REJOIN TEAM NEXT WEEK— Things Looking Up For Bellevue Five

By STEVE GILLISPIE
Star Sports Writer
Things are looking up for Bellevue College's basketball team despite a 3-14 record.
John Howard will join the Bruins on Feb. 2 after not attending school the first semester because of financial problems. Howard, a 6-2 starter last year, is expected to help Bellevue improve its record.

"John was a good all-around ball player for us last season," said Bruin coach Roger Nieveen.
"He was scoring in double figures, our top rebounder and played well on defense. With John we hope to better last year's record," Nieveen said.
Bellevue, only in its fourth year of operation, was 5-17 last season after switching to a schedule which included mostly four-year schools.
The Bruins were 6-17 their first year and 13-10 the second. However, most of Bellevue's opponents the first two seasons were junior colleges, technical schools or junior varsity teams of four-year colleges.
"We probably could've not played mostly four-year schools for another year," Nieveen said.
"But we had to switch over sometime since Bellevue is a four-year college. We've been competitive in most games, but we're still a young team," he pointed out.
There are three juniors, two sophomores and seven freshmen on the current Bruin roster.
"We've been playing better in recent games because our defense has improved," Nieveen said. "And it'll have to continue to get better if we're going to meet our goal."
Bellevue had a two-game winning streak broken Saturday night when Mount Marty took a 74-65 victory.

However, the game did have good points which pleased Nieveen. "We were down by 14 points at halftime, but came back to go ahead before losing," he said.
The Bruins face a big challenge this week with three games against formidable teams, the last games the Bruins will play without Howard.

Bellevue will play Manhattan, Kan., Bible and Parsons, Iowa, on the road before hosting Peru at home. "If we are at least competitive in those games we'll be all right," Nieveen said.

St. Paul Wins All-Indian Cage Tourney

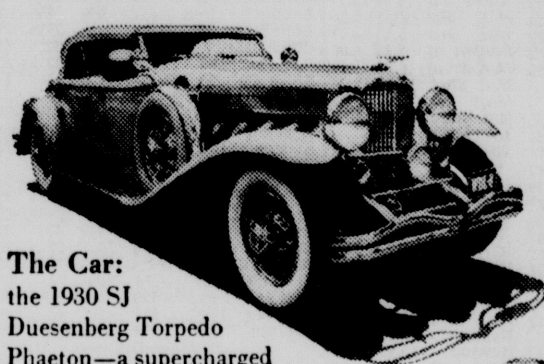

The St. Paul, Minn., Raiders captured the first All-Indian basketball tournament held at Nebraska's Coliseum over the weekend by defeating Rosebud, S.D., 115-87.
Les Six Toes of Rosebud was voted the outstanding player in the tourney which began Friday and wound up Sunday.

The tournament was sponsored by ASUN, the University of Nebraska student organization and the Council of Indian Students for the UNL campus.
Besides the finalists, teams from four states were attracted to the event including clubs from Minneapolis, Pine Ridge, S.D., Denver, Sioux City, Teoma, Iowa, plus four teams from the state including Winnebago, Macy, Omaha and a Nebraska University team.

Oil Stocks Are Under Pressure

New York (AP) — Stocks of international oil companies were under pressure Monday, and there was profit taking in selective issues as the market extended its decline to a fourth straight session.

Volume was moderate. "The market behaved pretty much the way it had been expected to," said John J. Smith, analyst for Fehnestock & Co.

He added the market was in a consolidation phase and drifted downward although there was no general pressure being exerted.

Still the closing Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell below the 900 level for the first time in several weeks, finishing Monday's session at 896.82, down 10.62 points or 1.17%.

The previous under 900 close was 892.23 recorded Jan. 4.

Smith noted that both Levitz Furniture and Teleprompter sustained sharp losses.

Levitz Furniture, which was the subject of a negative article in a financial publication, opened on the Big Board at the closing bell off 9 1/4 at 149 on 15,800 shares.

Teleprompter, dropped 8 to 129 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange. The company's stock was mentioned unfavorably in a trade magazine article quoted in a financial publication.

Meanwhile, stocks of oil companies involved in discussions with oil-exporting countries in Geneva closed lower.

Six Persian Gulf governments were reportedly seeking direct government ownership interest in oil operations in their countries.

Among the active oil stocks were Atlantic Richfield, down 7/8 to 67 1/2; Jersey Standard, off 2 to 74 1/4; and Gulf Oil, off 1/4 to 27.

The New York Stock Exchange index of more than 1,300 common stocks closed down 10.62 at 896.82. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was off 1.08 at 102.57.

The Associated Press 60-stock average closed down 3.4 at 327 1/2, with utilities down 1 1/2, rails off 1/8 and utilities down 1 1/2.

The A.M. price-change index dropped 1.1 to 24.85, as 4.2 million shares changed hands, volume 1.195. Armonex trades, 697 declined and 254 advanced.

On the Big Board, 119 stocks of 10,000 shares or more were traded, compared with a revised total of 169 such stocks Friday.

Topping the Big Board active list was General Cable, up 1/4 at 17 1/2 at 16,500 shares.

Government bonds were lower, while corporates were higher.

Soybeans Ease More Than 2c

Chicago (AP) — Commodity futures prices trended lower on the Chicago Board of Trade Monday with soybeans under heaviest liquidation and easing more than 2 cents a bushel.

Trade moved at a fairly active pace and dealings involved all facets. Commercial interests, however, were mainly sellers.

At the close, soybeans were 1/4 to 2 1/2 cents a bushel lower, March 3 1/4; wheat 1 to 1 1/2 cents lower, March 1 1/2; corn was unchanged to 1/4 lower, March 1 1/2; soybean meal 1/4 to 1/2 lower, March 76 1/2.

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right, then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you right.

Nixon Asks More For Military

The New York Times
By WILLIAM BEECHER
Washington — President Nixon asked Monday for authority to spend $83.4 billion for the Defense Department, an increase of $6.3 billion over the request for the current budget year. The new request markedly accelerates a rising trend in the military budget that began last year, after two years of decline.

The principal factors driving the budget upward, Pentagon analysts declared, are:
—A major stepup in a program to develop a new family of missile submarines in response to a mounting Soviet buildup.

—A program to buy modern ships, planes and tanks, the purchase of which was largely deferred during the height of the Vietnam war.

—A total of $4.1 billion in pay increases aimed at attaining an all-volunteer armed force by mid-summer 1973, as pledged by Nixon in his first presidential campaign.

$7 Billion Later
Actual spending during the fiscal year starting July 1 would total $76.5 billion, up $700 million from the estimate for the current fiscal year. The balance of the authorization, nearly $7 billion, would be spent during future years as weapons ordered under this budget would come off production lines.

In a news briefing, Defense Secretary Melvin Laird noted that Congress had cut about $3 billion from this year's defense authorization request. But he insisted that the new request, plus $254.8 million being sought in a supplemental appropriation, "asks for the absolute minimum amount necessary to safeguard our national security."

The new requests present the Democrats, who control Congress, with a political problem.

If they continue the trend of recent years of sharply cutting the defense budget, they run the risk of being blamed during the election campaign for contributing to continued high unemployment in the defense industries and for allowing the Russians to build stronger forces than the United States. If the Democrats fail to vigorously challenge some of the costly military programs, they face possible attack for giving only lip service to efforts to reallocate resources away from defense into a variety of domestic welfare programs.

Officially the Pentagon refused to estimate the anticipated cost of the war in Indochina during the coming fiscal year, but one well-placed source said it would probably fall to about $3.2 billion from the $6.5 billion estimated for the current fiscal year ending June 30. The estimate includes only costs directly traceable to the war, such as bombs dropped.

Strategic weapons of all kinds account for an increase of about $1.2 billion in the new budget and most of the $254.8 million supplementary request.

Much of the increase is concentrated in a $942 million request to develop a new 4,000-mile submarine-launched missile and a larger, quieter new submarine to carry from 20 to 30 missiles. Current Polaris submarines carry 15 missiles with a range of about 3,000 miles.

The administration also seeks permission, rejected last year, to start construction at the third and fourth Safeguard antimissile sites, as well as increased funds to step up development of the B-1 strategic bomber, to increase the pace of converting single-warhead Minuteman and Polaris missiles to those with multiple warheads; and to buy larger, more advanced planes from which the President and his aides could control U.S. retaliatory forces in the event of nuclear war.

To provide more modern equipment for the nonnuclear forces, the budget calls for retiring one of the Navy's old aircraft carriers, the Wasp, but seeks funds for components of a new nuclear-powered carrier, 6 nuclear-powered antisubmarine U-boats, 8 destroyers, and 42 SA-3 sub-hunting aircraft.

The Air Force, similarly, would get its first funds to purchase 30 F15 jet fighters; the Army, money for 166 more M60 tanks and an unspecified number of new Dragon antitank missiles, and the Marines, funds for its first procurement of the improved Hawk anti-aircraft missile.

Research and development, particularly on strategic command and control and weapons systems, is budgeted to rise $1 billion.

Reserve and National Guard forces are slated, under the request, for an increase of $600 million, much of that devoted to more modern planes, tanks and trucks.

Leonard Woodcock

Subsidies To Farmers Will Climb

Washington (UPI) — Direct subsidy payments to farmers for leaving land idle will rise by more than $1.1 million next year as the government tries to hold down production in the wake of record grain crops. But the automatic reduction in the amount of money needed to pay price supports on the crops that are grown will more than offset the increase.

This was disclosed Monday in the Agriculture Department portion of President Nixon's proposed budget for fiscal 1973, which starts July 1. The budget showed that Agriculture Department spending, even with the sharp "layout" subsidy outlays, would dip $605 million below the current $11 billion level.

Food aid programs administered by the department, including food stamps and surplus commodities, will rise $269 million to $4.1 billion.

Some cuts, or failure to propose increases, were expected to bring protests from farmers and some congressmen. For example, Nixon proposed trimming authorizations for the popular Rural Environmental Assistance Program, a conservation subsidy, from $195.5 million to $140 million.

He also proposed a $10 million cut in the $93 million school milk subsidy program and refused to propose any increase in rural electrification loans.

Over-all farm support spending under the new budget was estimated at $4.374 billion compared with $4.546 billion for the current year.

Wealth Shifting Toward Rich With Nixon, Woodcock Says

Washington (UPI) — United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock said Monday distribution of the nation's wealth under President Nixon has shifted toward the rich, and Congress ought to have "the gumption and backbone" to defy the administration and reverse this trend.

"They were not elected to the Congress to be the handmaidens of Mr. Nixon," he told a UAW political action meeting. "They were elected to represent the people of the United States."

The UAW president said Nixon had given huge tax breaks to business and the wealthy and proposed further tax advantages for them, yet was considering a value added tax that in the long run would be passed on to the consumer in higher prices.

And he said wage earners can expect even higher taxes because of Nixon's "swollen budget," the social needs the government needs to meet and the "reluctance of Congress and the administration to tackle the wastage in military spending."

Instead of trying to stimulate the economy by giving tax breaks to business, Woodcock said the government ought to be increasing the purchasing power of ordinary citizens, including making the government "the employer of last resort" for persons who can't find work in the private economy.

"We want to restore confidence, build up from the bottom because it works and not trickle down from the top because it doesn't work," Woodcock told several hundred delegates to the union meeting.

He said income distribution since World War II had been shifting toward the lower end of the scale, but began moving toward the wealthy when President Nixon took office in 1969. He said the top one percent on the income scale now receive 6.8% of the personal income, more than twice as much as the lower 20% of the people.

Woodcock said jobs for the unemployed was the nation's most important domestic need. He said one way to increase jobs was to require double payment for overtime because it was now cheaper for companies to work employees overtime at time-and-a-half than it was to hire new workers.

Outer Planets 'Grand Tour' Scrubbed In NASA Budget

Washington (UPI) — President Nixon scrubbed the Space Agency's ambitious plan for an 11-billion unmanned "grand tour" of the outer planets Monday and proposed spending more of its money for research on airplanes.

The $3.2 billion budget Nixon proposed for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) was virtually unchanged from pending in the current fiscal year that ends June 30.

The most dramatic cutback was in NASA's plan to send an unmanned spacecraft on a "grand tour" of Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto when these planets assume a rare alignment late in this century. Lack of support from the scientific community was a contributing factor in its elimination.

Nixon also cancelled a program to build a 750-million-pound thrust nuclear rocket engine that might have one day been used for a manned flight to Mars. He replaced it with a proposal to develop a far smaller, 15,000 pound thrust engine for unmanned planetary missions.

But in aeronautics research, which has taken a back seat for years to the more glamorous space projects, the President proposed increasing spending by about 50%.

He requested $163.4 million to try to quiet the noise of aircraft engines, build a new type of short takeoff airplane and join with the Army in research on a vertical-takeoff plane. This year aeronautics research received only $110 million.

In place of the "grand tour," Nixon called for a start toward developing manned probes to fly by Jupiter and observe it in passing.

Nixon's budget called for two final remaining Apollo missions, both scheduled for Moon landings this year. For 1973, he asked Congress to continue a program to develop an embryonic space station with $541 million additional funds.

The President asked $220 million for the space shuttle program, in which contracts are expected to be awarded this summer. This doubled the amount provided for the shuttle this year.

Medicare Takeover Asked

Washington (UPI) — President Nixon asked Congress Monday to assume the $15 billion annual cost that the nation's elderly now pay for Medicare coverage of doctor bills.

"A new commitment to the aging is long overdue to add dignity and usefulness to their lives," Nixon said in his budget message. Under present law, the monthly optional medicare premium, payable by the beneficiary, is supposed to reflect medical costs and it is scheduled to rise from $5.60 to $5.80 in July.

Nixon proposed an increase in payroll taxes to make up the $1.5 billion that the elderly now pay.

Nixon said he wanted to spend $50 billion next year on behalf of the aging, an increase of $16 billion over four years.

Among his proposals:
—A fivefold increase over 1972 spending to $100 million for the Administration on Aging to provide more homemaker services, home health aides, transportation and nutrition services to keep the aged in their own homes.

—Social Security and welfare benefits proposed in the House-passed welfare reform bill, which is pending in the Senate, which would add $5.5 billion to income of the elderly.

Appropriation To 'Indian Power' Program Upped

Washington (UPI) — President Nixon asked Congress Monday for more than a half billion dollars to put into effect his new "Indian Power" program which allows the American natives more say in programs affecting them.

The appropriation request of $521,053,000 — $102,322,000 higher than last year — was contained in the President's budget request for the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

"The increases indicated in the new budget are designed to boost the momentum of the major goals set forth by the administration of providing the American Indian the opportunity and assistance to live in prosperity, dignity and honor: And opening the way to total Indian involvement," Nixon said.

The new request would allocate more than $1,000, for each Indian living on a reservation in the United States.

It also includes $50 million for the 1973 payment authorized under the Alaska Native Claims Act signed by Nixon last month.

Spending Planned By Nixon

Washington (UPI) — This table from President Nixon's budget message for fiscal 1973 shows in summary the planned outlays of federal agencies. The estimates are compared with estimated outlays for this fiscal year, 1972, and actual outlays in fiscal 1971 in millions of dollars:

Dacca, Pakistan — Bangladesh was recognized Monday by the Soviet Union in a move announced simultaneously in Moscow and Dacca. The recognition was the first by a great power to the new nation proclaimed by Bengali separatists in East Pakistan. (More on Page 2.)

Bhutto Switches Stand

Karachi, Pakistan — President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto reversed his stand against Pakistan's financial elite and appealed for the help of businessmen in rebuilding the war-shattered economy. He also announced that no new categories of industry would be nationalized and released from detention three industrialists charged with holding foreign exchange outside the country illegally.

$246.3 Billion Proposed

Washington — President Nixon sent Congress a proposed budget of $246.3 billion for fiscal year 1973 that contains an estimated deficit of $25.5 billion. (More on Page 1.)

Cereal Monopoly Charged

Washington — Four food manufacturers

were accused by the Federal Trade Commission of illegally monopolizing the breakfast cereal market and thus forcing consumers to pay inflated prices. (More on Page 2.)

Political Milk Move Scored

Washington — The Nixon administration was accused by Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, in a lawsuit filed in Washington, of illegally raising the federal price support for milk in return of $322,500 in campaign contributions from the dairy industry. (More on Page 1.)

EEOC Proposal Delayed

Washington — A proposal to give strong enforcement powers to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission was delayed in the Senate when administration opponents, who had prevailed in early votes on the measure, saw their strength dissipate when Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson left the floor to go campaigning for the presidency.

Woman Last Seen Dec. 28

New York — The woman who opened a Swiss bank account under the name "H. R.

Hughes" was last seen in the bank Dec. 28, some three weeks after the purported autobiography of Howard R. Hughes was denounced by Hughes as a "hoax." The woman, who deposited and then withdrew $650,000 paid by McGraw-Hill Inc. for materials on Hughes, identified herself as Helga Hughes.

Welfare Limitation Invalid

Washington — Decisions by special federal district courts striking down "emergency" laws passed by New York and Connecticut that barred welfare aid to persons who had not lived in the state for one year were upheld by the Supreme Court. (More on Page 2.)

Welfare Residency Ban Upheld

... 3 ALLEGED DRUG PRICE FIXERS WIN NEW TRIAL

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court ordered a new trial Monday for three big drug firms convicted of conspiring to fix prices, and let stand rulings that keep New York and Connecticut from using a loophole to impose residency requirements on welfare recipients.

By a 3-3 tie vote the court upheld an appeals court ruling setting aside the 1967 conviction of Chas. Pfizer, American Cyanamid and Bristol-Meyers Cos.

The Justice Department had called the suit "one of the most important criminal antitrust cases in recent years." The government claimed that American Cyanamid, for instance, sold for $30,000 a quantity of tetracycline that cost only $1.52 to produce.

Fined $150,000 Each

After the 1967 trial, which followed years of court litigation and congressional investigation of antibiotic pricing, the firms were fined $150,000 each and agreed to pay $82.5 million in partial settlement of customer suits.

But the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals set aside the conviction in April 1970 on grounds the trial judge erred by overemphasizing "the more inflammatory issues of illegally exorbitant prices charged to a victimized public and patent fraud."

The New York and Connecticut ruling grew out of the Supreme Court's major 1969 decision that state residency requirements for welfare recipients are unconstitutional unless the state can show a "compelling government interest."

HEW Says Loophole

Under this provision — the Department of Health, Education and Welfare called it a loophole — both New York and

Connecticut claimed that rising costs and increasing numbers of recipients forced them to impose a one-year residency requirement to trim the welfare rolls.

In its brief to the Supreme Court, Connecticut had asked "whether it is better to have some restriction, such as a residency requirement, and thus be able to keep up with a high level of payments, or have no residency requirements and enter into a race with sister states to see which state can maintain first place in the lowest level of benefits. . . ."

In other actions, the court:

—Refused to stay the effect of a decision requiring broadcasting stations to accept paid advertising on controversial issues. It will decide later this term whether to hear an appeal which would reverse a regulation set by the Federal Communications Commission.

—Let stand the 1971 Mississippi state legislative elections, in which only one black was elected, but said a court-ordered reapportionment plan would have to be restudied before the next election in 1975.

—Ordered new arguments be heard this spring in the bribery conviction of former Sen. Daniel B. Brewster, D-Md., but refused to review the extortion conviction of Alabama's former attorney general Richmond M. Flowers and two others.

—Agreed to decide how a lower court should have determined the voluntariness of a Missouri prison inmate accused of murdering another inmate in a riot.

Russia Recognizes Bangladesh

Moscow (AP) — The Soviet Union has accorded diplomatic recognition to Bangladesh, becoming the most powerful nation so far to give its blessing to the nation carved from Pakistan by war.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported early Tuesday that President Nikolai V. Podgorniy and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin telegraphed the Kremlin's decision to Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman in Dacca.

"We convey to you and to the people of Bangladesh friendly wishes of peace, well-being and success," they told the sheik, "in consolidating the state sovereignty of your country, in building a peaceful democratic republic."

The Soviet step had been expected after diplomatic recognition extended by several Communist countries in Eastern Europe. It followed consistent Soviet support for India in the India-Pakistan war which gave birth to Bangladesh.

Throughout the U.N. Security Council's consideration of the two-week war last month, the Soviet Union and India insisted that a Bangladesh representative get a chance to speak. But the matter never came to a vote.

India led the way in diplomatic recognition for Bangladesh once the secessionist government set up shop under the protection of the Indian army. Bhutan, a small nation whose foreign relations are guided by New Delhi, followed.

Since then, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, East Germany, Poland, Barbados, Burma, Nepal and Mongolia have announced recognition. Four Scandinavian countries say they plan to do so when their Western nations make up their minds.

The United States, which backed Pakistan in the war with India, has not granted recognition. The Bangladesh foreign minister, Abdul Samad Azad, said Monday he hoped Washington's endorsement would come "sooner than expected."

Recognition by the Nixon administration would "reflect public opinion in the United States on Bangladesh," he added in a statement in Dacca.

Guerrilla 'Tiger' Gives Up Arms

Tangail, Bangladesh (AP) — Bangladesh's most flamboyant guerrilla leader surrendered his men's arms to Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman on Monday in a ceremony to dramatize government control over the countryside.

"I took up arms when called by my leader," said 24-year-old

Abdul Kader Siddique—the "Tiger of Tangail." "Now I give up my arms as my leader orders."

Nearly 3,000 weapons were neatly stacked for Sheik Mujib's inspection, but how much substance there was to the ceremony was uncertain.

Israelis Swoop Into Syria

Tel Aviv (AP) — Israeli warplanes swooped 25 miles inside neighboring Syria Monday, rocketing and strafing Arab guerrilla camps near Dara'a, Syria's major southern city. The Israeli military command reported.

The air strikes followed "increased terrorist activity from Syrian territory aimed at Israeli citizens," a command spokesman said.

Israel has reported 14 Arab guerrilla raids this month on the simmering Syrian frontier.

The Israeli command said its jets scored direct hits on the tents where "several hundred terrorists" were camped.

Radio Damascus, however, said Syrian aircraft and ground gunners drove off the attackers before any casualties or damage had been inflicted

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

In the winter of 1945, the Nebraska Legislature, among other things, was attempting to name an official state tree. Today, due to the decline of the American elm, the 1972 Legislature is trying to do the same thing.

An interested party in 1945 was the noted Nebraska author, Mari Sandoz. The Nebraska State Historical Society has unearthed a communication written at that time by Miss Sandoz, advocating the cottonwood as the state tree.

Her communication first appeared in public in the news columns of The Lincoln Star, then under the editorial direction of a friend and fellow writer, the late James E. Lawrence. The plea by Miss Sandoz for the cottonwood did not prevail then but perhaps her eloquence at that time will now bear fruit.

She wrote: "The cottonwood has always been the favored tree of man and beast in the trans-Missouri country, whether standing in golden, sheltering groves along our autumn streams or as great lone trees that shaded the oriole's swinging nest and the deer and buffalo from the heat of summer. The beaver used it to build his dam and to grow the fine felt that clothed and adorned generations of the fashionable."

"To the Indian it was firewood and winter feed for his pony, its leaves and thin twigs a smokeless and almost odorless fire for his war parties. To the Sioux it was also the wakan tree, furnishing the holy pole for his sun dance that was to bring unity and courage to the people and make the buffalo many and fat for the hunt."

"To the early fur hunters it was the landmark and wood and shelter, too, and material or rafts to float his cache to market. To the Overlander it was cheer and shade, wood for fire, logs to buoy his wagons over swollen streams and ferries and bridges to carry them over while the hollow of its trunk was the trail postoffice where letters could be left to be picked up by travelers going the other way. Treaties were signed in the shade of the cottonwood, soldier stockades built of its logs, and frozen feet warmed by its fire."

"To the early settler, the cottonwood was also a landmark and cheer and a promise that there was water in the earth for crops and animals and men. Its wood fed his campfire, built his loghouses, furnished ridge poles for his soddies, furniture for his dugouts . . ."

"The cottonwood grows anywhere in our region and its seedlings are available by the thousands in any community. They for the sandbars of our rivers, sprout in low places along the highways, come up along the stock tanks and on the lawns, and if you can't come by a seedling to plant in the spring, a cutting with a few buds will do. Set into moist ground, it will shade your dog the first year; you and your family in two years."

"Plant the trees close and if there is one among you who is fussy about the silk that flies for a few days in the year, cut the offending young trees out and you will have enough. Properly spaced, the cottonwood can live a long time. A few of the old trees of the 1880s along the upper Niobrara were still there in the thirties, magnificent, noble trees, the kind that were praised in the writings of eastern travelers and visiting noblemen going up the Platte a hundred years ago."

"And suppose those you plant don't live to shade the mouldering graves of your grandchildren? In the summer evenings their leaves will rustle a growly song for you and in the winter they will glisten as no other tree on the icy mornings; the redness of the setting sun will linger in their tops, caught in the rivers, you will see a yellowing glow in the tips, a promise of spring, of another good year to come."

"Why not the cottonwood?"

At this point, the cottonwood has received other endorsements, including that of the Nebraska Association of Nurserymen and the original legislative sponsor of the green ash. There may be a more perfect tree than the cottonwood but none more appropriate as the official tree of the Cornhusker state.

Lady Libbers Resent Hurricanes' Names

NEW YORK — Mrs. Roxey Bolton, liberationist, is trying again to kick up a storm because hurricanes are named after women!

She blew into the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's hurricane-planning conference and demanded that female names be taken off 1972's tropical storms — and the names of U.S. senators be substituted. Her theory, though she didn't mention it, probably is that senators' names are appropriate because senators tend to move slowly and circuitously, and they also blow off a lot.

Mrs. Bolton, whose first name "Roxey" eliminates her from even the most exotic hurricane lists, also suggested that any storm with winds over 130 mph be dubbed "hurricanes."

"As long as people can name 'her-icanees' after us, it's just another way of putting women down," she explained, adding: "I'm sick and tired of hearing that 'Cheryl was no lady as she devastated such and such a town,' or 'Betsy annihilated this or that.'"

The scientists, while giving her a chilly reception, were doubtless envisioning their own headlines as they listened to her pleas. . . . "Unpredictable him-icane Teddy tore into Texas today . . ." or "Tropical storm Edmund swirled up the East Coast last night . . ." Not bad.

The males who heard Mrs. Bolton's urgings indicated that there was some justice in her appeal to drop female names in regard to natural tempests, but would give no promises of change.

Not one of them had the questionable taste, apparently, to mention that female names are more appropriate because, after all, hurricanes are the product of Mother (rather than Father) Nature.

But Dr. Karl Johannessen, associate director of the National Weather Service, threw Roxey Bolton a bone, saying that perhaps it would be wise if the names of men were to be used one year, and the names of women used during alternate years.

I think it would be even better to have a pre-season drawing every year. For each lettered hurricane, three male and three female names could be thrown in a hat, and one of them drawn.

To make it absolutely fair, the drawing should be executed by a Ringling Bros. half man-half woman — using both hands.

That way, the whole thing would be left up to Dame (not Sir) Fortune!

I am reminded of the words of Dr. Joseph Peek, who addressed the men of America — long before the Women's Lib movement — thusly:

"I would advise you, my gentlemen friends, to study woman as does an anthropologist — part by part, action by action, mood by mood. And perhaps, then, you will eventually come up with some idea about just what makes your woman react as she does."

"She is superior to you in most every way except brute force and long-range thinking."

"She is more tender than you, and yet more cruel, more yielding and yet more determined, more innocent and yet more filled with guile, and firm in her belief that anything you can do, she can do better."

"And damn it, too often she is right!"

Cloud Over Exon's Head

One might think that among disgruntled taxpayers, Gov. J. James Exon stands high in popularity. But reports that seep now and then out of outstate Nebraska do not bear out such thinking.

It appears very possible that Governor Exon might suffer in any re-election bid some of the same fate that fell to former Gov. Norbert Tiemann. Among other things, Tiemann was hurt by dissatisfaction over the growing property tax rate.

The current dispute over the personal property tax is not the same thing as real property taxation but the two are easily mixed up in the minds of voters. What the personal property hassle does is put the spotlight on taxes and the light appears to shine brightly on all kinds.

Thus, controversy over the personal property tax spills over into discussion of real property taxation. Right or wrong — and it is the latter — the governor cannot escape the consequences of this.

Exon has done a commendable job of trying to separate governmental responsibilities in the tax field but his efforts are constantly diluted by the school aid advocates. Now, the federal government may be coming more dominantly into the picture.

President Nixon has talked of local property tax relief through expanded federal aid to education. But the difficulty of all such aid, at both state and federal levels, is that it contains no guarantee of relief at the local property tax level.

While all such forms of aid have increased in recent years, the level of local property taxation has continued to go up, not down. Some maintain that it would be higher yet were it not for state and federal aid but that is a theoretical matter pitted against the fact of higher and higher property tax levies.

The property tax, it seems, grows constantly more unpopular and we wonder if the day might come when it is made a relic of the past at all levels of government. In the meantime, it will continue to be a thorn in the side of public officials at all levels of government, whether they are directly responsible for it or not.

VD Into The Millions

National figures indicate some two million current cases of gonorrhea, half a million cases of syphilis and the latter growing to the tune of 85,000 a year. It all adds up to what many authorities describe as a VD epidemic.

Nebraska is no exception, having 267 cases of gonorrhea and 1.6 cases of syphilis per 100,000 of population. Currently, the Nebraska Legislature is considering a law that would allow the treatment of VD patients under 20 years of age without notification by doctors of parents.

The proposal relates to one of the VD problems—the hesitancy of getting medical attention because of the social stigma of the disease. The only way to communicate the disease is through intercourse.

There may be some value to the Nebraska proposal in that it might help obtain proper care in cases where care might otherwise not be provided. But it will also be another encouragement to the kind of life in which VD has been spawned.

This is a life of sexual promiscuity, including birth control pills, easy abortions and liberal theories on family life and pre-marital sex. The tendency in this area has been that if you can't beat 'em, join 'em.

If you can't stop pre-marital sex, the pill is the next best thing. If you can't stop VD, treatment in privacy is the next best thing.

We wonder how far it will all go before we finally decide to try to reverse the trend rather than making the best of it. The best answer to VD would be a return to the old-fashioned idea that it is wrong to sleep with anybody and everybody who might be tempted or encouraged to go to bed with you.

Eventually, we are going to have to find a way of reversing rather than just dealing with moral decay that now afflicts such a large part of our population.

Malta Is Viewed By Many Different Eyes; Maltese Know 'Permanency' Of Communism

PARIS — The strategic importance of Malta is measured differently by every interested nation. For Britain the island lost much value when the British Empire was dismantled and London ceased believing that God was an Englishman and the road to India must be kept open.

However, for the United States, Malta became increasingly significant as American bases in Arab North Africa were extruded and the Sixth Fleet, covering both Israel and the East Mediterranean, could rely only on Greek harbors for support. If Malta fell into hostile hands, the Sixth Fleet would feel bottled up from behind.

Obviously both Moscow and the Arab capitals are aware of this. Russia hasn't seriously contemplated taking on responsibility in Malta since Czar Paul thought of accepting titular leadership of the island's Order of Knights. Now, however, with a strong Soviet presence in the East Mediterranean, a Maltese base would move its implicit political influence westward.

Egypt is not necessarily committed to helping Moscow gain that objective and Libya, linked with Egypt in a confederation, flatly opposes it. Nevertheless, were Malta to kick out Britain and NATO while accepting Libyan financial aid as a substitute, the Arab lands would feel that resulting embarrassment to the United States Sixth Fleet would undermine Israel's strategic position.

Italy also is acutely aware of Malta. During World War II, when British planes and ships there cut axis supply lines to North Africa, the Italians paid dearly. Italy's weak political situation is related to its exposed external position. For years successive governments have been feeble coalitions designed only to keep the massive Communist party from power.

Now that Yugoslavia rumbles with centrifugal forces in Tito's old age, the Italians fear a successor Belgrade regime with closer ties to Moscow might re-establish Soviet influence in the Adriatic. Were this accompanied by the neutralization or pro-Russian alignment of Malta, Italy could become the kernel in an ideological nutcracker.

For these reasons, the continuing Maltese crisis is of great concern. Malta and that other important island, Cyprus, are integral parts of the West by culture and tradition. Every effort should have been made to invite them to join NATO when they first became independent. But this opportunity was mishandled although Britain, a NATO partner, continued to maintain military bases in both.

Each island, with a small population, limited income and modest industrial potential, drifted into the political cross-currents between Russia and the West.

Archbishop Makarios, Cypriot president from the start, was a neutralist. Malta's Prime Minister Mintoff, who gained power only last year, was sometimes called "the Mediterranean Castro."

This is unfair. He simply wants enough foreign money to finance an economic shift so that within five to seven years the island will no longer depend upon rental of its naval-air facilities and dockyard services to survive. This is a logical aspiration but London logically argues it isn't going to pay through the nose to guarantee its own ouster a few years hence.

This is what the argument is about. Mintoff hasn't helped his own cause by arrogance. When Chancellor Brandt, a fellow socialist, offered him a modest West German annual contribution to help the NATO cause,

Missing Cat

Lincoln, Neb.

We have lost our cat. Since scouring the neighborhood, advertising on two radio stations and placing an ad in the lost-and-found section of the newspaper have been to no avail, I've decided to try the editorial page.

The cat is a short-haired, black and white male, about six or seven months old. He has no collar and has had all shots that are required. The cat has little value other than being loved by our daughter.

Not only are we anxious to have our cat back for this reason, but also because the cat is on medication. After several trips to the veterinarian, he determined that he could possibly be a mild epileptic. He does have seizures occasionally and the medication he is on was controlling these seizures.

The cat disappeared on Thursday evening, January 13, from our home in Wellington Greens, which is in the vicinity of 70th and South.

It would greatly relieve us to find out something about our cat. Our phone number is 499-1295.

Freedom Of Choice

Lincoln, Neb.

Is Nebraska giving the independent voters freedom of choice at the polls? Does that mean the Republicans and Democrats will still adhere to party ticket without freedom of choice? Republicans could have only the list of Republican candidates and the Democrats, the Democratic ballots in the past.

I'll register as an independent so I can have freedom of choice regardless of what political party the candidate is for. It will save me registering before the primary every year so I can make my vote count.

Hickman, Neb.

Three cheers everything the Nelson girls and their father said in regard to the 4-Hers giving up the horse barn in favor of a fieldhouse. I have been a 4-H leader for three years and my children have been in 4-H for six years. Do people realize how many young people are involved in horse 4-H? From age nine through 19, 4-H gives them a chance to really learn about horses and to show their horses and learn how to compete and "give their all." Then when it's over, if they didn't win top ribbons, we'll hear them cheer and applaud for the guy or gal who did.

Sure, we know Nebraska is No. 1 and we want the best for our University, but must we take away from the 4-Hers to do it? Remember, 4-H reaches them at a much younger age and could just make a tremendous difference in the life of a child who may never make the university, or, better yet, who might just make it because of 4-H. Let's don't discourage them by putting their interests way down on the list.

For any who think I am talking about a limited number of children, I invite them to call the county extension office and see how many people, young and older, are involved in 4-H. Then check and see how many enter the county horse show alone. And then check how many young people bring their horses from all over the state to the State Fair 4-H horse show. It will be surprising.

We don't want to be written off. We need that horse barn at least as much as the university needs a fieldhouse. To us it is important.

Lincoln, Neb.

I just wonder how Dr. Miele would feel if his retarded child were spanked until she had bruises. Wouldn't he want to be informed? Would he believe the person who reported the incident belonged to the "divisive forces"?

Anyone who has a child, teenager or adult in any of the hostels must be concerned. A 21-year-old house-mother! Age doesn't guarantee a good house parent but I should think the odds would be greater if someone older were hired.

Stuart Changes

Lincoln, Neb.

It can't be true! I was shocked to hear of plans to close the Stuart Theater on April 30 for a complete remodeling of its interior, which includes lowering the ceiling halfway down.

Over the years, I have sat in the Stuart Theater and marveled at its fantastic interior. Those huge, ornate chandeliers glowing a soft red or blue can have an almost mystic effect on a person.

In my opinion, altering the Stuart is akin to the desecration of a cathedral.

I wonder if there are others in Lincoln and surrounding areas who feel as I do?

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have excessive salivation to the point that I awake two or three times a night and find I have to wipe my face. This has been happening for six to eight months, during the day as well as at night, but has become more frequent in the last month or two. I'm in my 70s and have worn full dentures about 20 years, but I have the habit of squeezing down on them during the day, especially in the evening when I'm reading or studying something. It's not a grinding of the dentures, but more an unconscious pressing down to squeeze the saliva out and swallow. When I become aware of it I try to stop and that helps for a while. Even though his pressure action has been practiced just about all the years I've worn dentures, the excessive saliva flow has started only in the last six months or so. I've wondered whether the copious salivation is a result of the constant pressure on the dentures.—H.S.

With dentures it is better to have a generous flow of saliva than a dry mouth as is rather common at your age.

Things that come to mind first in cases of excessive saliva are smoking, medications such as those containing iodine, inflammation of the mouth, and nervous disorders, chief of which is Parkinsonism.

You give no hint that any of these is involved. Keep in mind, though, that some of the complex vitamin-mineral preparations contain iodine, and you might be unduly sensitive to iodine.

You say the dentures fit comfortably; there could be a sensitivity to materials you use with the dentures. Have you changed in the last six months or so?

It is also possible that squeezing down on the dentures initiates a reflex flow of saliva. You may, perhaps, have gradually increased the habit of doing this. Think so? What happens if you do not wear the dentures at night? That could offer a clue.

If any of these suggestions turns out to be helpful, that's fine, but I can add also that there are medications to lessen salivary flow and might be tried if your physician concurs.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My sister has been suffering from a "frozen shoulder." Would you discuss this and what is your advice? She has been going to a licensed physical therapist prescribed by an orthopedist, and is now much better.—Mrs. J.C.J.

A frozen shoulder is an exceptionally stiff shoulder—the same thing can occur in other joints, too.

When the shoulder is "frozen," movement or rotation of the arm can be extremely painful, and often the amount of movement is very limited, quite apart from the pain.

The condition can result from injury, or from a disease such as bursitis, or as a result of reflex changes following a heart attack or lung disease, or from sheer inactivity of the arm and shoulder, whether as the result of a stroke or being immobilized because of a fracture. Or, of course, changes resulting from some forms of arthritis may be involved.

In any event, adhesions within the joint limit motion and make it painful—and the longer the joint is not moved because of the pain, the more "frozen" it becomes.

Rest and application of heat usually are the first measures, followed by supervised exercises, designed to loosen the joint. Injections of hydrocortisone into the joint may be necessary to lessen the pain.

In some instances, the joint may be so "frozen"—that is, so bound by adhesions—that an orthopedist may have to manipulate the joint under general anesthesia to loosen the adhesions.

Your sister evidently had good advice: she went to an orthopedist, and now, by her physical therapist's work, is gradually loosening the joint.

It is pointless to expect immediate results. The whole business takes time. Cooperation by the patient—even when it hurts—is essential.

In your sister's case, you can see progress. I trust that she's wise enough to continue.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter is planning to burn railroad ties in her fireplace. Besides the horrible odor, I think it would be bad for their lungs. These ties are treated with a preservative. I just don't think it could be used as wood in the home.—Mrs. O.G.

I can't see any harm in using that wood in a fireplace. What makes you think it would be harmful? After all, the smoke goes up the chimney.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My hands shake and seem to be getting worse. What causes this and what can I take to help me? I have been this way for about two years.—Mrs. L. C. M.

There are different causes of hand tremors, the commonest ones being Parkinson's disease, aging, and overactive thyroid. Treatment depends on what the cause is, and you will have to have your doctor diagnose the cause.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Do you think baking soda is harmful to take for sour stomach? I take it frequently. At times I also spit up a real bitter liquid and have a burning sensation in my throat. What do you think causes this?—J. E. R.

Depends on what you mean by a "sour stomach." A very occasional pinch of soda isn't going to be harmful, but it's so easy for some folks to get the "soda habit," which turns into a sort of rollercoaster. Soda combats stomach acids; nature responds by producing more acid, and it becomes a vicious circle.

From the little you've told me, I'd suspect a hiatal hernia, with nothing wrong with your stomach except that its natural acids escape upward. Best see your doctor for a reliable diagnosis.

Dr. Thosteson is happy to receive reader's questions, and whenever possible, will answer them in his column. However, due to the great volume of mail received daily, he regrets he cannot answer letters individually.

Liquor License Denied In Brief Session

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

In one of the briefest sessions on record — under 15 minutes — the City Council Monday denied the application of Richard Moulton for a Class C liquor license at 1134 N St.

Attorney David Tews, the only person appearing at the hearing, told the Council that the Lancaster County Beverage Association opposed granting the license.

He pointed out that under the Council's set "numbers policy" only 133 liquor licenses are allowed in the city and currently that quota is filled.

Board Okays Dismissal Of Policeman

The Personnel Board Monday upheld the decision of Lincoln Police Chief Joseph Carroll to fire former Police Sgt. Rollie Woodruff from the police department.

In a letter to Woodruff released by the board, chairman Dennis Fettinger said that the board "unanimously affirmed" the firing by Chief Carroll.

Woodruff, 45, a ten-year veteran of the department, was discharged following a department investigation of an Aug. 20 incident in which he "struck" another officer.

Woodruff appealed his firing to the Personnel Board which held a public hearing Jan. 13th.

At the hearing Woodruff admitted the incident and said he had no hopes of returning to the department. However, he said he wanted to point out certain complaints he had about police personnel matters.

Cause Of House Blaze Said Burning Incense

A piece of incense left burning on a wood log was the apparent cause of a Sunday night fire which severely damaged the Donald Reeves residence at 4843 Calvert and seriously injured one fireman, Fire Inspector Dale Boettcher said Monday.

Seven units answered the fire alarm and brought the blaze under control in about 30 minutes.

Lt Dale Helvey sustained fractured vertebrae when an explosion inside the house blew a wall down on him. He was reported in "fair" condition Monday at Bryan Memorial Hospital.

Two other firemen were slightly injured, but were not hospitalized.

Boettcher said one of Reeves' stepsons had placed the burning incense on a log that was standing on end near the fireplace woodbox which contained paper and kindling.

He estimated that the woodbox caught fire about 45 minutes after the Reeves' stepsons left the house.

The explosion which knocked down the wall was caused by a backdraft, which occurred when firemen attempted to enter the house according to Boettcher. The sudden rush of air into a burning building sometimes produces an explosive condition, he said.

Boettcher said it was questionable whether the house could be repaired.

In addition to extensive smoke and heat damage, the inspector said the west wall had been blown down, the east wall had been forced out four to six inches and the roof had been raised about an inch.

To Register Prostitutes

Belo Horizonte, Brazil (AP) — Police investigator Francisco Grossi plans to register the city's estimated 10,000 prostitutes to have authorities a clearer picture of the profession's problems. He says the prostitutes, whom he prefers to call "butterflies," will be able to enroll in government health and literacy programs.

School-City Library Combination To Be Explored

The City Council Monday directed the Library Board to explore the possibility of combining school and city library facilities.

In a morning meeting with Library Director Charles Dalrymple the Council expressed interest in such joint facilities.

Councilman Bob Sikyta said it seemed to him that it would be better, both from a financial and a use standpoint, for the city to use existing libraries in the public schools instead of continually building new branch libraries.

Dalrymple replied that he is opposed to this concept.

"It is a matter of square footage — there has to be a separate kind of facility since different types of books are needed for an adult library," he said.

Dalrymple added that the economy of space is not as much as the Council might think. In addition, he said, "We get more community participation in a non-school library."

Sikyta replied that at the public schools the city has "the utilities, land, better police protection, plus the fact that people are used to going there."

Dalrymple said he did not think there was any desire of the people to have such joint facilities. He cited a study conducted several years ago which indicated this.

However, Council member Helen Bosalis stated that she thought the public now is interested in such a joint project. She said she has been trying to combine the libraries systems for "13 years now."

Councilman Merle Hale added, "If a school library has a separate wing, adults will use it."

In other business Personnel Director Walter Mitchell told the Council that the President's Pay Board has cleared all raises for city employees.

The wage increases for the city's 1,400 employees averages 5% across-the-board and went into effect when the wage-price freeze was lifted Nov. 13th. Mitchell said that special permission from the Pay Board will be needed for wage hikes higher than 5.5%.

In other business the Council decided to look into the possibility of having the city do purchasing and personnel work for Lancaster County.

Mitchell said that some county officials at one time had expressed an interest in this.

Exon Requests Restoration Of Quarterly Road Funding

Gov. J. J. Exon Monday asked U.S. Transportation Secretary John Volpe to restore a fourth-quarter cutback in promised federal highway funds to Nebraska.

In a letter to Volpe, Exon said the "erratic" release of federal obligation funds to the state during the last quarter of fiscal 1972 "is resulting in a major curtailment of our fiscal year 1972 construction letting program."

Exon requested a restoration of the original fourth quarter expected allocation of $8 million.

The governor also asked restoration of funds that were delayed because of sudden major rules changes in the second and third quarters, to bring the requested allocation to $23.6 million for the fourth quarter.

In the letter, Exon told the transportation secretary the sudden rules changes governing release of federal funds "increased imbalances of un released apportionments between the states which has existed since 1968."

"The second quarter change in rules caught Nebraska at a particularly vulnerable time and will result in our dropping further below the national average in the maximum amount of our apportionment that can be obligated during fiscal year 1972."

The letter also said although the states are "periodically reminded by Washington" as to the need for better management of state programs, "the most serious deterrent to such planning was lack of predictability of the amount of federal funds to be available."

"There is an urgent need to correct this serious management deficiency as soon as possible," the letter said.

The governor also sent a letter to U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Nebr., urging him to "use your good offices to assist our state in our effort to have reversed arbitrary and unfair decisions by the federal bureaucracy."

Exon was the author of a resolution which was unanimously adopted by the executive committee of the National Governors' Conference over the weekend concerning the highway fund crisis.

The resolution opposed reductions in states' normal obligation authority as a result of "arbitrary and precipitous programming actions" by the federal highway administration

84 Report For Jury

Eighty-four Lancaster County residents reported for jury duty for the first two-week session of the January term of Lancaster District Court.

The jurors and addresses are:

Accident Victim Is Reported In Critical Condition

Donald Wilson, 22, of 219 F was listed in critical condition Monday at Lincoln General Hospital following a one-car accident Sunday night near Roca.

The State Patrol said Wilson was the driver of a car which missed a turn at a "T" intersection on a county road a half mile east and a half-mile south of Roca.

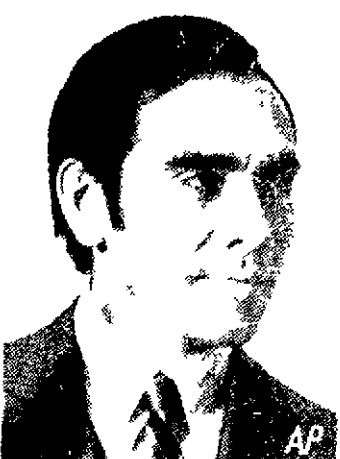

Three other persons, identified as passengers in the car by the Patrol, were hospitalized but were reported in "good" condition by hospital authorities.

They were Dale Merrill, 20, of 3601 So 18th, David Schwartz, 16, of 910 E, and James Roberts, 19, of 2645 No. 42nd.

Officials Ask Dismissal Of Hair Lawsuit

Officials of O'Neill High School have asked dismissal of a federal district court lawsuit seeking $35,000 in damages by a sophomore at the school who was not allowed to attend classes because of his hair length.

Michael Thomas earlier this month won a temporary restraining order allowing him to return to classes. He was defended by the Nebraska Civil Liberties Union.

In answering the complaint officials of the O'Neill school said Thomas was made to sit in an area of the school normally called the "balcony" which constitutes a study hall and said instruction was available to the youth at all times.

School officials said their dress codes provide only that hair be well-groomed and neat and contended the code "allows a sufficient leeway for development of students' personality without allowing the children to be a disruptive influence."

'Professional Accountability' Said Drawing To A Close

The director of the Center for the Study of Social Intervention at Yeshiva University in New York City said here Monday that the day when most professionals were accountable only to themselves appears to be drawing to a close.

Prof. Robert Reiff who teaches at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine Yeshiva, said that demands for professional accountability to non-professional groups is having a "profound" effect on the role of the professional in American life.

Reiff was in Lincoln to address a colloquium at the University of Nebraska psychology department.

In an interview, Reiff said what he termed an "old humanistic" notion of professional duties "to take care of the poor and the disadvantaged doesn't exist anymore."

Although the number of professionals increased considerably following World War II, Reiff said, that change was accompanied by an increase in the affluence of the middle class.

And those "middle Americans" are now affluent enough "to buy up all the services and leave nothing to the poor," he said.

The poor, he said, are beginning to realize the only way they "can get services is through publicly supported programs."

And he said they are demanding, especially in urban ghettos, a voice in the professional decision-making process on boards of community social service agencies.

Thus, he said, non-professional ghetto residents are becoming the agents of change in professional life, and they are demanding that professionals be accountable to the community.

Wooden Spoon Has 'Passing Out' Party

Outlandish costumes and unusual skits have become a traditional part of the annual 'passing out party' of the Wooden Spoon. The organization of 50 women who gather once a month — during the winter months, that is — for dinner and a program held its 'passing out party' on Tuesday evening, Jan. 18. The celebration for the strictly social club is symbolic of the old board passing the reins to a new group of officers and board members who have no previous knowledge that they are to be so honored. Pictured above, seated, are the new Wooden Spoon officials. From left to right, they are Miss Elsie FitzGerald; Miss Bess A. Richards, secretary; Mrs. Cloud Smith, Mrs. Edward H. Heitman; Miss Dorcas Weatherby, president; and Mrs. Jim E. Alexander. Not pictured is new board member Mrs. Jean Furr. Standing, from left, are the outgoing board members, including Mrs. Lillian Polley, Mrs. Dorothy C. Olson, Miss Elva McFie, Mrs. R. V. Shumate, Mrs. Robert Keller, and Miss Doris O'Donnell.

Party Honors Miss Glenda Hall

If you have looked at your thermometer you'd never guess that actually spring will be here before you know it — But of course between now and the day that the moon and the tides decide that spring has arrived, there is considerable activity. Among those activities are weddings — the weeks ahead are filled with them. One of the early February weddings will be that of Miss Glenda Hall and Larry Malick which is to take place on Saturday, Feb. 5. And since the wedding is only matter of days away it goes without saying that Miss Hall has been busy with parties. A recent courtesy for the soon-to-be bride was the informal party and shower for which Mrs. Arthur Suttin and Mrs. James Sinamark were hostesses last Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Sinamark. In the picture, from left to right, are Mrs. Don Hall, mother of the bride-elect, the honoree — Glenda Hall — Mrs. Glenn Hendericks, Mrs. Ed Carlson, Miss Sandy Hall and Miss Kim Forke.

Evening Wedding

The marriage of Miss Cheryl Renee Simonsen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Simonsen of Pender, to Craig E. Malmberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Ardell Malmberg, also of Pender, was solemnized at a ceremony which took place on Saturday evening, Dec. 11, at St. John's Lutheran Church near Pender. The Rev. H. L. Henning read the lines of the service. Miss Kathy Simonsen attended her sister as maid of honor; and the bridesmaids included Mrs. Janette Simonsen and Mrs. Claudia Simonsen both of Pender. Miss Cherri Malmberg of Pender, sister of the bridegroom, was junior bridesmaid. Clay Malmberg, Danny Simonsen, Randy Simonsen and Corey Malmberg, all of Pender, served as groomsmen; and the corps of ushers included Curtis Malmberg, Jim Novak and Mike Muesel. For her wedding, the bride chose a gown of white velvet styled in the Empire mode. The bodice featured a portrait neckline and long, tapered sleeves. A camelot cap held in place her tiered veil of silk illusion; and she carried a cascade of pink roses and stephanotis. The couple is making their home in Lincoln where Mr. Malmberg is a student at the University of Nebraska. The bride is careering at the State Capitol.

Unicameral Ladies Club

The members of the Unicameral Ladies Club gathered at the Nebraska Club on Monday afternoon, Jan. 24, for a 12:30 o'clock meeting. Hostesses for the event were Mrs. William Swanson, Mrs. Orvan Keyes of Springfield, Mrs. Sam Klaver of Omaha, and Mrs. William Hasebrook of West Point.

Don't feel overweight, ...puffed-up, bloated —when body-water retention "swells" your waist, thighs, legs, arms. It's natural that you, too, may have a tendency to retain water in your system—body bloating fluid that builds up during the strenuous days of your pre-menstrual or menstrual period, or stress and over-tiredness. That's why it makes such good sense to try X-PEL, the amazing new "Water Pills." They are a gentle diuretic that helps you lose water-weight gain, and relieve body-bloating puffiness, tummy bloat, arms and legs enlargement, and water retentive "swelling" due to water-weight gain. Guaranteed or money back. Ask your druggist for X-PEL "Water Pills" today because it must work for you, or you don't lose a penny.

MISS VIRGINIA FERRARA

This morning Mr. and Mrs. V. Frank Ferrara of Wahoo, make announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Virginia Gayle to John G. Young, son of Mrs. Jack G. Young of Portland, Ore., and the late Mr. Young.

Saturday, Feb. 19, has been chosen as the wedding date.

Miss Ferrara is a graduate of the University of Nebraska where she is a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. She now is working as a buyer in one of the Portland shops.

Mr. Young is a graduate of Portland State University.

MISS BARBARA SCHOENLEBER

Announcement is made this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Schoenleber of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Barbara, to Donald L. Reimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orin C. Reimer of Concordia, Kan., formerly of Lincoln.

The wedding is planned for Saturday, May 27.

Miss Schoenleber is a former student in Hastings College and now is working as a secretary in the Nebraska State Probation offices.

Mr. Reimer is a junior at Hastings College where he is majoring in vocal music education, and where he is a member of Eta Phi Lambda fraternity.

Wedgewood Manor Lincoln Heights Southwood Summit South Hills

Moving into a new city or even a new neighborhood can be a frightening experience — But then again, it can be quite satisfying when your new neighbors go all out to make you feel welcome and at home in your new residence.

One of the most recent arrivals to Lincoln and the Wedgewood Manor area are the members of the James Burch family.

Mr. and Mrs. Burch and their two daughters, 13-year-old Kelly and seven-year-old Susan, made their move to Lincoln shortly before Christmas. They are former residents of Wichita, Kan., and Mr. Burch is now employed with the Parke-Davis Co.

Well, getting back to the 'make yourself at home in the new neighborhood' get-togethers, we learned that Mrs. Burch was the guest of honor at a luncheon out on the town recently. Of course, all welcoming activities for the distaff side of the families had to wait until the youngsters were well settled in their class rooms.

The luncheon took place at Miller's Tea Room on Tuesday, Jan. 18, and making up the group were Mrs. Burch, of course, and her new neighbors, Mrs. Walter L. Waltke, Mrs. Wesley Tomhave, and Mrs. Nolan Bode.

in suburban areas

But before the luncheon, Mrs. Burch was welcomed into the home of Mrs. R. D. Hartley, where she was a guest for a morning coffee.

And then the entire Burch family was treated to lunch on their moving day when Mrs. Lester Donlan entertained them at her home.

The Rev. and Mrs. James Hansen recently returned to their Lincoln Heights home from a 10-day tour of the Holy Land.

Accompanying the suburban residents on the tour, along with some 50 others from all over the United States, were John Scott and the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Birdwell, all of Lincoln Heights.

During their vacation, the Rev. and Mrs. Hansen made a stop in New York City, where they saw the Broadway production of "Fiddler On the Roof."

The tour took the travelers to Israel, Jerusalem and the Sea of Galilee. Jerusalem had to be one of the favorite spots, since it has hardly been modernized, and camels, sheep, and donkeys wander through the streets. Everything is similar to what it is thought to be during Bible times.

And then the group stopped off in Athens

for a few days — then it was back to New York and on to Lincoln.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Vladislav Sobotka in Southbrook Summit has been bristling with activity recently due to the fact that the family has welcomed some very special guests. Mr. Sobotka's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sobotka of Redwood City, Calif., and their son, Craig, spent a week in Lincoln recently.

Other guests greeted by the Sobotka family were Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Norris of Casper, Wyo.

Two of the Sobotka children, Miss Janet Sobotka and Richard Sobotka both celebrated their birthdays in January, just three days apart. Miss Sobotka's birthday is Jan. 6, and her brother's birthday is Jan. 9. In honor of the occasion, Mr. and Mrs. Sobotka entertained at a buffet supper.

MISS COLLEEN EHMAN

Of interest to campus circles is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Ehman of Chicago, Ill., formerly of Lincoln, of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Colleen, to Joseph G. Cihal, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cihal of Dwight.

Saturday, March 25, is named as the date of the wedding.

Miss Ehman is a senior at the University of Nebraska where she is majoring in elementary education.

Mr. Cihal is engaged in farming near Dwight.

Luncheon Planned

The Craft Class and Art Department of the Lincoln Woman's Club will have a project luncheon at the Clubhouse on Friday, Jan. 21.

The proceeds from the 12 o'clock event will be used for philanthropic purposes — and the members hope to purchase a piece of equipment for a local hospital. The Lincoln Woman's Club last year donated a vital machine to St. Elizabeth Community Health Center.

Reservations must be made by 12 o'clock noon Wednesday, Jan. 26. Mrs. Myrtle Harpham is in charge of reservations at 435-6048.

Extension Meeting

One of the most used kitchen utensils was the topic of the recent meeting of the Odds and Ends Extension Club.

"Knives" was the group's subject, and the discussion was lead by Mrs. R. M. Sandstedt.

Hostess for the event was Mrs. Elton Lux, who was assisted by Mrs. Leola Bowers.

One highlight of the program was a quiz on "How Sharp Are You?"—testing the members' knowledge of the quality of knives and how to use and protect them. Gertrude Skinner's poem, "Grandma's Apron," was read by Mrs. Sandstedt.

Hostess for the next Odds and Ends meeting on Thursday, Feb. 17, will be Mrs. V. H. Petersen.

Artists' Display

On Monday an art show, which includes the works of three Lincoln artists, opened at the First Federal Building and Loan auditorium in downtown Lincoln.

All members of the Lincoln Artists Guild, the three artists include Mrs. Shirley Martin, president of the Guild and a teacher of art at Southeast High school; Mrs. Waunita Ray, and Mrs. James Ray who is an instructor in art at the Regional Center.

The 52 pieces include oil paintings, watercolor, oil acrylic, pen and ink drawings, wood carvings, and other work in the art media.

The show will continue through Monday, Feb. 14.

PEO Group Will Meet

The members of PEO, Chapter FB, will be treated to a group birthday party when they gather at the home of Mrs. Walter Stephenson, No. 6 Sulfex Place, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 25.

Assisting hostesses for the 8 o'clock party will be the chapter officers.

Attendants Named

Judging from what we hear there will be few vacancies as far as processional aides are concerned during the spring and summer.

As we have said before, there was a time when June was the popular month for weddings. June, of course, actually has lost none of its glamour — it's just that there are so many runners-up among the other months of the year.

April is a particularly busy month for weddings this year, and not too far behind is March.

And speaking of March — one of its brides is Miss Arlene Busboom who has chosen Saturday, March 18, for her marriage to Gerald T. Giraud. The ceremony will be solemnized at 7 o'clock in the evening at the Trinity Methodist Church.

This morning Miss Busboom makes announcement of the members of the bridal entourage. For her maid of honor the bride-elect has chosen Miss Judy Lostroh, and her bridesmaids will be Miss Nancy Bettin of Jansen; Miss Mary Larsen and Miss Elisa Clarke. Miss Wanda Van Andel of Denton has been named as the junior bridesmaid, and Tracy Lawton of Pleasant Dale will be the flower girl.

Randy Beezley will serve Mr. Giraud as best man, and seating the guests will be Gary Busboom, William Buntane, David Giraud, brother of the bridegroom-elect, and David Douglas. Stanley Giraud, also a brother of the bridegroom will light the candles.

The wedding music will be played by Paul Newton, guitarist.

State Argues Against Overturning Conviction

Attorneys for the State of Nebraska Monday told the Nebraska Supreme Court the high court should not overturn the first-degree murder conviction of Nathaniel Lawrence Hall of Omaha for an August, 1964 killing.

Hall was sentenced to life imprisonment after pleading guilty to murdering Joseph Kellinghaus and is appealing the conviction under the state's post-conviction relief law.

Hall contends his plea was induced by the existence of a coerced confession.

However, the state, in a brief written by Asst. Atty. Gen. Bernard Packett, argued Hall's conviction could not be overturned unless Hall had been advised by an incompetent attorney.

Such was not the case,

Packett contended, because Hall was represented by the Douglas County Public Defender's Office.

An evidentiary hearing on Hall's charges was held in the lower court, Packett said, and no evidence was presented to substantiate his allegations, leading the lower court to deny Hall's motion.

Chinese Executed

Hong Kong (UPI) — A right-wing Chinese-language newspaper said communist Chinese authorities in Canton recently executed three young men charged with stealing. Sing Tao Jib Pal, quoting arrivals from the south China city, said, "Communists sacrificed them in order to improve the social order and stabilize the society."

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Some hands require hairtrigger defense for the contract to be defeated. Consider this deal where East-West must cooperate perfectly to achieve their full potential.

West leads the king of diamonds and East — who knows that his partner has led the king from the A-K — should signal for a continuation by playing the queen on it. This enables West to lead the ten of diamonds at trick two, which East overtakes with the jack in order to return a trump and prevent South from ruffing any clubs in dummy.

Declarer wins the trump with the ace and leads a low club towards the queen, hoping to find West with the king and thus avoid a second club loser.

But East wins the queen with the king and leads another trump, and it does not matter from here on in how declarer plays the hand. Eventually he loses a heart, two diamonds and two clubs to go down one.

Now let's go back to trick one and have East signal less dramatically for a diamond continuation by playing the nine instead of the queen. In that case, West might well continue with the ace in the hope of finding partner with either the singleton nine or the doubleton 9-6.

If West did that, South would make the contract, for he could not then be stopped from ruffing a club in dummy to produce his ninth trick.

The play of the queen of diamonds on the king guarantees that the queen is either a singleton or is accompanied by the jack. It is this universally accepted method of play that enables West to confidently lead the ten of diamonds at trick two and start declarer down the road to defeat.

Abby

don't tell your son

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 33 years. My husband is 62 and I am 58.

Recently my husband lost his job because he had an affair with a young married woman who worked where he worked.

My question: Should I write and tell our son the truth about his father? Our son lives in another state but will be coming home soon, and I'm afraid somebody might tell him. This is a small town and you know how people talk, and I'd rather have him hear it from me than from a stranger.

Also, the young woman my husband had the affair with is still working there. Her husband is employed and I am not, and I am too old to start looking for a job. Do you think that's fair?

UNHAPPY AT 58
DEAR UNHAPPY: No. If your husband was fired because of the affair, the woman should have been fired also. Don't tell your son the reason for his father's dismissal. He may not hear about it. But if he does, tell him the truth.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion on a statement my boyfriend has made to me. Let me preface by saying that our relationship is very serious, and we are considering marriage.

We were discussing children, and I asked him if he would ever change a baby's diaper. He replied, "Absolutely not. Just the thought of it is revolting!"

Abby, I am not saying that this particular task would be shared equally between us, but I would like to think that if I were not feeling well, or happened to be away for a few hours, my husband would assume the job if necessary.

How do you feel about this?

NAMELESS, PLEASE
DEAR NAMELESS: I think there should be some "changes" made before you have children. And for openers, one should be your fiancée's attitude.

Sen. Simpson Acts To Get Budget Out Of Committee

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

An effort was initiated in the Legislature Monday to pull the operational budget bill out of the Appropriations Committee where it has been stalled for more than a week.

Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln produced a motion to take the bill from the committee and bring it to the floor for debate.

But Simpson said he would delay consideration of the motion until Tuesday in order to give the committee an opportunity to act.

With one member, Robert Clark of Sidney, absent due to illness of his wife, Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings said, he would not call the committee into session.

Marvel said the budget bill is ready for floor consideration "as far as I'm concerned."

But a number of committee members — perhaps a majority of five — want to make further changes in the bill before it is advanced to the floor.

A number of them complained about Marvel's unwillingness to call a full committee session to consider further action. The committee has not met since Jan. 13.

"I stand ready to meet and I prefer to meet this week," Sen. Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox said.

"We should meet," Sen. Fern Hubbard Orme of Lincoln said. "There have been days we could have met."

Among proposed changes which may command a majority vote of the committee is removal of program budget limits on state agencies.

Mrs. Orme has announced her intention to pursue such a change. Marvel opposes it.

Efforts may also be undertaken to increase the University of Nebraska budget figure.

Marvel said work on the basic budget bill was substantially completed last Dec. 15, and "several attempts" to move the bill since that time have failed.

The last effort on Jan. 13 resulted in a 4-4 tie vote, with one member not voting.

Marvel told the Legislature he broke the committee into two subcommittees on penal reform and personnel in order to "keep the business of this committee moving."

Sen. John Savage, a committee member, said he would prefer to see the committee attempt to move the bill before the Legislature takes any action of its own.

Another member, Sen. Herb Nore of Genoa, said the committee has been subjected to "some real heavy arm-twisting and high level lobbying by the Lincoln delegation."

When Mrs. Orme objected to any inference that she had "twisted anyone's arm," Nore replied that he "should have said the Lincoln lobby."

Responded Savage: "Some of us dupe more easily than others."

Sen. Herbert Duis

No-Fault Alternate Rejected

By The Associated Press

A bill characterized as a possible alternative to no-fault automobile insurance drew stout opposition Monday from insurance industry representatives, and the Legislature's Banking, Commerce & Insurance Committee responded by killing the bill on a 5-2 vote.

Sen. Herbert Duis of Gothenburg, sponsor of LB1075, gave the only favoring testimony at a public hearing. A representative of the State Insurance Department, Galen Ullstrom, joined insurance company spokesmen in opposing the bill.

Assorted other no-fault auto insurance bills have been introduced at the current legislative session and await hearing before the Banking Committee.

Duis' LB1075 would have required insurance firms to offer liability policies which insure specific persons rather than specific vehicles, while prescribing minimum coverages, including $100 per week for one year for loss of time.

Duis said the bill, while it might need some refining, is designed to reduce premiums and provide better coverage, but the insurance men said the measure would not accomplish the objectives.

Lawrence A. Frazier of Lincoln, representing the Farmers Mutual Insurance Co. of Nebraska, said the bill offered nothing which cannot now be obtained from some insurers. The measure, he said, would "increase premiums, increase confusion, be impossible to rate and cause more problems than it solves."

The committee heard and sent to the floor LB1194, increasing payments to the Banking Department for certain chartering and other hearings and services. Also reported out was LB1152, affecting security posted by banks to become depositories for First Class Cities.

The committee killed 5-1 a previously heard LB1097, sponsored by Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett and dealing with the withholding of security deposits given landlords.

Opponents of the measure

Student Fee Halt Could Lead To Default On Bonds

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Opponents of a bill cutting out mandatory student activity fees at state-supported colleges said such action would mean defaulting on approximately $51 million in bonds, according to University and state college officials.

And the long term result of the bill, they said, would be to prompt a "financial crisis" which could eliminate revenue bonds as a means of financing state construction.

As a result, the debate over Kearney Sen. Gerald Stromer's LB1271 took on unexpected financial overtones instead of arguments over political persuasions.

Dual Effect Noted

Merk Hobson, University of Nebraska executive vice president for academic affairs, noted that the Stromer bill, which the Education Committee did not act on, would not only cut-off funds for student government and newspapers but would also eliminate student fees as a means to retire revenue bonds.

If the bill passed, Hobson said, the University and, in turn, the state would default on $26.7 million in outstanding revenue bonds used to construct dormitories, the student union and the student health center at Lincoln.

The total annual debt for retiring the bonds amounts to $1.5 million of which $547,000 comes from mandatory student fees.

Would Damage Credit

"It is extremely unlikely that the Board of Regents could meet these financial commitments without the use of a mandatory student fee," he said. "Default would seriously damage the credit of the University of Nebraska and, in turn, the State of Nebraska, and would, in all probability, eliminate any future revenue bond financing for whatever purpose."

"In my judgment, the provisions of the bill will result in arbitrary judgments which lead to suspension of other legislative decisions through the appropriations act."

The bonded indenture which the Regents were authorized to make by the Legislature includes a provision that student fees be used to pay them off. To cut off this revenue source, Hobson indicated, would be tantamount to default.

Shift Explored

Omaha Sen. Duke Snyder asked Hobson if the debt could be shifted to capital construction costs and thus financed by general and cash funds.

Hobson replied that the Legislature had felt that part of the cost of the dormitories should be borne by those who use it.

University President Durwood Varner told the eight senators that the retirement of the bonds and maintenance of the facilities account for 90% of the estimated $2 million collected annually in mandatory student fees. Only 9.7%, Varner said, goes to the support of student government and the Daily Nebraskan.

Likewise, Bert Overcash, legal counsel for the Board of Trustees of the State Colleges, painted a similar picture for the 4 colleges if LB1271 were to pass.

A 1969 revenue bond program which the state still owes $25 million on would be impaired by the measure, Overcash stated. He told the senators that a substantial portion of the $410,000 collected annually in mandatory activity fees goes toward retirement of the bonds.

Testimony Heard

Parents, students and teachers appeared at the public hearing to back the bill. Here's a cross-section of their testimony:

Mrs. Cleo Horstman parent: "The conferences on sexuality and revolution aren't higher education. They're what I call back-alley education."

David Beauregard, English department: "What kind of an impression of the University does this (the Daily Nebraskan and the human sexuality conference) leave in the minds of the people of this state?"

John Braeman, history professor: "A subsidized press is not a free press."

In other action, LB8741 and 1215 were held over.

Payroll Tax Proposal Killed

The Legislature Monday buried a proposed constitutional amendment which would have authorized Lincoln, Omaha and first class cities to levy a payroll tax on non-residents who work in the city.

LD978, authored by Sen. Duke Snyder of Omaha, was erased on a lopsided 36-5 vote.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly offered the bill motion, contending that the proposed tax would be discriminatory, affecting only "outsiders who happen to be employed in the city."

Other non-residents also use

city services, Warner noted.

The only way to apply the tax equitably would be to establish "a toll gate into the city," he said.

The fact is, Warner pointed out, non-residents who use city services now help contribute through city sales taxes in both Lincoln and Omaha.

Snyder said people who "take wages from the city and use its conveniences should help pay the freight."

An estimated 32,000 non-residents work in Omaha, he noted.

When that figure is translated into family numbers, "we are supporting a city of 100,000" through resident taxes he said.

Omaha's population has increased 41% in the last 20 years, Snyder said. But its automobile count is up 134% and its public works budget has increased by eight-fold to a figure approaching $25 million a year.

Those non-residents who use the city streets daily should help support them through payment of a payroll tax since they are not required to pay the city wheel tax, Snyder suggested.

Sen. Dave Stahmer of Omaha supported Warner's motion, noting that he has a bill (LB236) awaiting floor action which would authorize an Omaha payroll tax on both residents and non-residents.

Sen. Richard Marsh of Milligan wondered if Snyder's proposal might result in all senators, except members of the Lincoln delegation, paying payroll taxes on their legislative salaries to the Capital City.

"That's one of the hazards of the trade," Snyder replied.

Waldron To Request Kissack's Resignation

By United Press International
Sen. J. James Waldron of Callaway said Monday he was drafting a letter to the governor asking him to ask for the resignation of John Kissack as director of the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Waldron made the statement on the floor of the Legislature after referring to a newspaper article in which Kissack attacked a resolution by Waldron pending in committee which would eliminate two new requirements in the state motor vehicles inspection program.

The Waldron resolution would eliminate requirements which became effective Jan. 1 calling for tighter windshield requirements and the removal of a wheel and drum during the inspection.

In the article (in the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star), Kissack said he had told an interim study committee on rules and regulations, of which Waldron is a member, he was "prepared to modify or withdraw any inspection regulations which might draw a substantial amount of criticism."

But Waldron contended Monday the committee was only notified of proposed changes in the program and decided not to accept them, and was never again contacted about the rules.

The Callaway senator said he checked and found the rules went into effect Jan. 1, and then asked the motor vehicles head about it.

Waldron contended Kissack denied the rules had gone into effect until he was shown the statement which showed the rules had become effective Jan. 1.

Furthermore, Waldron said, now that the changes are in effect, they are not being enforced.

In the newspaper article, Kissack referred to Waldron as "one of those young, relatively inexperienced senators who sometimes get carried away with their own eloquence."

Stahmer Offers Tax Relief Plan As Local Spending Lid

By United Press International—Omaha Sen. David Stahmer suggested Monday his property tax relief plan could become a means of putting the spending and taxation lid on local government.

Stahmer, in appearing before the Legislature's Revenue Committee, termed the measure an alternative to other property tax relief plans the Legislature has before it for consideration.

But, he said, his measure could also be amended to impose controls aimed at "holding the line" on both spending and property taxes at the local government level.

The terms of the measure would call for a roll-back at the rate of two per cent a year in the assessed value of all property in the state.

Property is currently assessed at 35% of actual value. Ultimately, under the Stahmer plan, it would be assessed at 25% of actual value.

Each year's roll-back, Stahmer told the committee, would cost about $25 million in sales and income tax replacement revenue.

However, along with the cut-back provision, the lawmaker suggested amendments which could be added to prohibit any dollar increases for one year in local property taxes.

It could also, in an amended form, prohibit any salary increases above $300 a year for local governmental subdivision employees.

In state government, he said, the move has been to impose limits on salaries. But each year, he said, "We hand out millions of dollars with no strings attached" to local government.

Or, Stahmer suggested, the bill could be amended to prohibit funding increases of various programs in excess of the average past increases over a five-year period.

The committee, however, adjourned without taking any action on that bill or another, LB1251, sponsored by Sen. Richard F. Proud of Omaha.

Proud was not present and Stahmer handled the explanation of the bill's intent for him. The bill, he said, would essentially limit the homestead property tax exemption program to persons over 65-years-old and to disabled veterans.

There is a "need to help the elderly and retired stay in their homes," Stahmer told the committee. Allowing them substantial tax breaks through the exemption program would be one way of doing it, he said.

The Nebraska Home Builders Association, however, objected to the bill saying those persons in addition to the elderly who benefit from the exemption program should not have it taken away.

May 11 Decried Mari Sandoz Day

By resolution, Nebraska's Legislature decried Monday that people of the state recognize May 11 as "Mari Sandoz Day."

May 11 is the birthday of the Nebraska author, credited in the resolution with portraying Nebraska pioneers "in their true light." Chadron State College has established the Mari Sandoz heritage fund to perpetuate her memory and her works.

Sen. Leslie A. Stull of Alliance, who introduced the resolution which lawmakers adopted 35-0, noted that Gov. J. J. Exon last year had designated May 11 as Mari Sandoz Day. "My intent is to make it an annual day," he said.

Top Secret Revealed

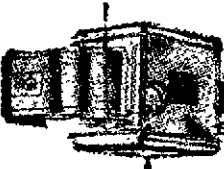

Highly confidential sources today disclosed the secret of the fantastic "Beef Eater" roast that is being served at the Holiday Inns in Lincoln, Nebraska. The secret is NOT to tenderize it or flavor it with artificial spices but rather to let the meat develop its own natural tenderness and flavor. They take a large 60-70 lb. roast of Nebraska very finest top choice beef and age it carefully for 20 days. Then it is roasted slowly, very slowly, while it bastes in its own juices. When it reaches the peak of perfection, it is carved to order and served with the natural succulent juices. Is it no wonder that everyone has "seconds" of this great Beef Eater roast? (of course at the Holiday Inn they don't charge for "seconds" . . . that would not be fair, and besides . . . they like people.

DeCamp Scores Nixon Handling Of Indo-Pakistani Fight

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh Monday said the Nixon administration's handling of the Indo-Pakistani conflict "will in five to ten years be recognized as one of the biggest foreign policy disasters in U.S. history."

DeCamp, a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate, said that "in the near future, the loss of India will be seen to be even worse than the loss of China to the Communists."

India, DeCamp said, is "the only large functioning democracy among the underdeveloped countries," one of our longtime allies, far more populous than Pakistan and was "right from a moral standpoint."

If the present trend in foreign policy continues, he said, "we will probably lose Canada as an ally within the next five years."

Proposed Forced Membership Ban Gets Narrow First-Round Approval

By The Associated Press

After barely surviving a kill vote, a proposed constitutional amendment prohibiting anyone from being forced to join an organization to practice a profession was given narrow first-round approval in the Legislature Monday.

A motion to kill Omaha Sen. George Syas' LB379 was voted down 21-20 and was followed moments later by 25-18 approval of Syas' motion to advance the measure off general file, the first stage of floor debate. Twenty-five votes are needed to advance.

Syas said his proposal would ban what he termed "one of the greatest closed shops ever devised by man" in the law profession.

Attorneys practicing in Nebraska are now required to join the state bar association, Syas said.

"Some lawyers have told me they would join anyway, but they don't want to be forced to join," said Syas.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha offered the kill motion, calling Syas' bill "weak and ill-advised."

"This bill would not help solve the problems of administration of justice," said Chambers.

Other organizations may come before the Legislature seeking approval of required membership, Syas said, just as now exists in the law profession.

Sens. Fred Carstens of Beatrice and Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, both attorneys, spoke against the measure, saying it could lead to a lowering of standards in the legal profession if attorneys did not have to join the bar.

Other constitutional amendment proposals occupied lawmakers on the 15th legislative day of the current session.

By a 27-7 vote, lawmakers gave first round approval to Sen. Warner's LB337, submitting to voters a constitutional amendment allowing the Legislature to establish a different formula for valuing agricultural real estate located on the fringes of urban areas, for tax purposes.

Such farmland takes on added value for its potential for housing and industrial development. Warner said owners often are forced to look for non-agricultural uses for such land in order to pay the higher taxes resulting from this still-unrealized added value.

A similar constitutional amendment was submitted to Nebraska voters in 1966 and was rejected, 240,083 to 153,127.

Warner said 22 states have laws or constitutional amendments to deal with the problem dealt with in his LB337.

Lawmakers killed 25-14 a constitutional amendment proposal under which counties could be allowed to adopt a county manager form of government.

The proposal had come from the Constitutional Revision

Commission. But Sen. Ramey Whitney of Chappell, who headed the commission, reported Monday there had been a change of heart. He said he was unable to find any counties which want the bill, LB761, and he made the motion to kill it.

Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh was sustained in a ruling that Whitney could move to kill the bill even though he was one of the original sponsors of it.

A 25-18 vote advanced from general file LB611, which would submit to voters a constitutional amendment eliminating a present "35% requirement in constitutional amendment elections. Specifically, the proposal would remove the requirement that favoring votes on a constitutional amendment winning majority approval must total at least 35% of the voting turnout at the election.

The 25 favoring first round votes on LB611 are short of the 30 which the bill will need for final passage.

Marvin Seeking Delegate Position

A West Point man filed with the secretary of state's office Monday as a candidate for delegate to the Democratic national convention committed to support Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

Lawrence Marvin will seek election from the First Congressional District.
